Perjury Charged in D. C. Police Flareup

Maher Tells Of Erasures In 3 Precinct Signal Book

Barrett Adviser Attacks Evidence Given to Congress Crime Committee

By Benjamin Bradlee and Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporters

Alteration of key police records by someone still unidentified was revealed last night, and top police officials said the alteration indicated perjured testimony had been given to the House crime inquiry.

Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher said erasures had been discovered in the patrol book of the Third Precinct, indicating someone had told lies to the House District crime subcommittee.

This newest explosion to rock the Police Department is one of a series set off last week by Captain Anthony Richitt, who was angered by a disciplinary transfer from the Third to the Eighth Precinct.

Maher revealed the discovery of altered records at a special press conference at Police Headquarters, where Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett sat as a silent sponsor. Maher has been serving as the liaison man between the crime committee and the District government, and as counsel for the Police Department.

In revealing what he called "evidence tending to show perjury," Maher said the crime committee had told the Police Department it was free to make its own investigation of the matter.

Maher made this statement to reporters:

"The matter is still under investigation. On the basis of what we have now uncovered there is evidence which tends to show that perjury was committed on Friday and Saturday before the subcommittee.

"Upon completion of the investigation, consideration will be given whether the United States Attorney will be asked to present the matter to the grand jury."

At last night's press conference, Maher did all the talking. Barrett sat by, whistling softly.

Maher said erasures had been discovered in the patrol system signal book at the Third Precinct, erasures that concerned an entry made as to the whereabouts of Richitt at 8:40 a. m. on January 31.

"Who performed the erasures?" Maher was asked.

"We're not prepared to say," he replied.

"Were police officers involved?" reporters asked.

"We're not prepared to say," Maher replied again.

Richitt charged, first to reporters and then to a subcommittee hearing, that Emmitt Warring, reputed gambling kingpin,

German Shell of 1943 Found in Family Couch

London, March 8 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Connold of East Grinstead often sat around their home at nights wondering what became of the cannon shell from a German plane that zoomed through their house in 1943.

It was never located—until today.

Workmen stripping the old living room couch found the shell, still unexploded, buried in the stuffing.

Central High School will become Cardozo

(Dr. Richard B. Foster named associate superintendent of District schools. See Page 11.)

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The Board of Education yesterday transferred Central High School to use by Negro students.

The action ended nearly a year of debate and deliberation by board members for a solution to the problem of overcrowding in Negro high schools.

The question, considered one of the most controversial ever brought before the board, attracted city-wide attention. A half-dozen hearings were held. Nearly 300 persons jammed the small board meeting room yesterday to hear the decision.

By approving the transfer, the Chest Official Urges Single Charity Drive

Luchs Proposes Meeting in 30 Days To Consider Plan

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Pooling of all fund-raising efforts for private Washington charities was proposed yesterday by Frank Luchs and seconded by a member of President Truman's cabinet.

Luchs, Community Chest campaign chairman for 1950, made his proposal at the annual meeting of the Community Chest Federation.

He urged one giant campaign for Greater Washington charities to forestall "a breakdown of our system" for providing for private welfare. The present system is threatened, he said, by the ever-growing number of fund drives.

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, in seconding Luchs' proposal, warned that unless something is done privately to end "the great number" of such drives, over the country, something will be done at the government level to have a "financial collection agency," which would collect for all national charities, and allocate funds on the basis of collections. He said local charities must be consolidated at the local level.

Luchs' proposal, which was unanimously supported by those present, had these main points:

1. The Community Chest should establish an open-door policy under which any organization which met the Chest's qualifications would be admitted to the annual drive.

2. It should welcome a meeting of all representative community groups within the next 30 days to consider consolidating fund campaigns.

3. If such a meeting were not called for by "grass roots" community elements within 30 days, the Chest itself should request it.

4. It should offer to act as a nucleus for all such organizations in the new formation.

Luchs said the Chest doesn't "wish to be considered presump-

Restrictions On School Aid Are Rejected

Labor Unit Refuses To Limit Funds' Use To Public System

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By votes of 21 to 3 the House Labor Committee yesterday slapped down two amendments designed to restrict Federal aid to education to public schools only.

The vote, however, indicated no real shift in the committee on the controversial religious issue, which only the day before had brought defeat to an amendment which would have required the use of Federal funds for bus transportation to parochial school pupils.

Bitter as the religious controversy appears to be on the surface, it is actually secondary to the real fight, members say. The major issue now, according to committee members, is whether there can be any Federal aid without Federal control.

Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.), a former school superintendent, once in favor of some sort of bill for Federal aid to education said yesterday:

"I am now convinced that we

Italian Red Ranks Decrease 500,000, Report Discloses

Rome, March 8. (U.P.) — The Italian Communist Party admitted indirectely today it has lost 500,000 members since its political heyday just two years ago.

A report by the secretariat disclosed for the first time that the Communists have been adding youth movement — non-voting age—membership figures to the adult party's rolls for last year to pad out totals.

The report said that as of February 28, 1950, the Communist Party had 1,966,498 paid-up adult voting—age members, compared with a declared strength of 2,500,000 adults just before the last general elections in April 1948.

Late Marriages, Contraception Blamed for Woman's Disease

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Late marriages, contraception and bottle feeding were blamed here yesterday for the modern woman's disease, endometriosis.

The disorder is characterized by the formation of pain-producing cysts within the pelvic cavity.

To combat it, Dr. Donald S. Daniel, assistant professor of surgery at the Medical College of Virginia, advocated that women marry at 18 and bear a child every two or three years.

"If women would use their reproductive organs as our mothers and grandmothers did," he declared "there'd be far less endometriosis."

Dr. Daniel, of Richmond, Va., spoke before surgeons assembled here in eighteenth annual session of the Southeastern Surgical Congress, at Hotel Shoreham. The scientific meetings will conclude today.

Until about 30 years ago, Dr. Daniel pointed out, endometriosis was relatively unknown, even in medical records.

Today, he said, it is "more common than acute appendicitis."

The Richmond surgeon placed the blame on less child-bearing and less breast-feeding. And behind this, he said, lies the changing economic condition with its correlating increase in the use of contraceptives.

Endometriosis is caused by misplaced tissues of the membrane of the uterus which grow and mensurate outside the womb. The monthly bleeding within the

Armed Might Is Growing, Bradley Says

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Despite economies in the military establishment, the Nation's combat forces, as geared to national policy, are being strengthened, Gen. Omar N. Bradley declared yesterday.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff told the Women's National Press Club, at a Statler Hotel luncheon, that present United States forces "cannot give the United States an absolute guarantee against a disastrous blow." But, he added, "these balanced forces are a part of the longer-range plan to provide an optimum chance of withstanding an attack, to be followed immediately by mobilization."

"Because the United States will not make war of its own volition," said Bradley, ". . . our forces in being are maintained at a strength which can prevent disaster in the event we are attacked, and which can strike a retaliatory blow that will be strong enough to slow down the aggressor while we mobilize. It would be economically foolhardy and politically inconsistent for us to maintain in being forces sufficient to win a major war."

A Threefold Task

The task which faces the military establishment, Bradley said, is threefold. In brief, he explained, it is:

1. To build toward sufficient forces in being to avert disaster and to retaliate vigorously in case of attack.

2. To have a mobilization potential which will insure ultimate victory.

3. To combine with friendly nations for collective security.

These aims, he declared are being realized, although he cautioned that further cuts which affect the mobilization base "should not be effected without very careful consideration of what it may mean to the United States security in five or ten years."

The Combat Picture

As for combat readiness of the three services, Bradley said:

1. The Navy is "progressing rapidly" with its submarine and antisubmarine program and should not be stinted in this respect.

2. The Army has managed to provide 10 divisions and additional regimental combat teams while effecting the budget savings demanded.

3. The Air Force is building toward 48 groups, in many respects larger and stronger than equivalent groups two years ago.

"During the past year," Bradley said, "the Department of Defense has reported a continuing program of economy to the people of the United States, and there have been publicly-expressed grave doubts as to whether these economies had adversely affected our security.

"It is unfortunately true that no matter how hard we try, in many instances real savings can only be made by cutting down the funds allowed. To cut out the fat and build the muscle, you frequently have to cut out the rich diet. Wartime habits of operation in a hurry, at a greater expense, are hard to break, but once broken, improved efficiency with real savings is the result."

U. S. Opposes Unseating of U. N. Chinese

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The United States will vote against any attempt to unseat Nationalist China from the United Nations, Secretary Acheson said yesterday.

But, he added, the United States would acquiesce if a majority on any United Nations body voted to seat the delegates of Communist China instead.

This was an indirect answer to a memorandum from Secretary General Trygve Lie of the U. N., suggesting that China's seats on U. N. bodies should go to the government which actually rules most of the Chinese people.

The Secretary did not comment directly on Lie's memorandum, although he did say the State Department was studying it.

His answer meant that for the present, at least, Lie would fail in his efforts to get the Communist Chinese seated and thereby to end the Soviet boycott of 14 U. N. organizations.

Acheson discussed the U. N. problem at a press conference at which he also said:

1. He expected that another meeting of the foreign ministers of the 12 North Atlantic treaty nations would be needed in April or May; he thought it "possible," too, that the foreign ministers of Britain, France and the United States might meet late in April or early in May. But the subject matter of the two meetings still had to be worked out.

2. He estimated that the recent revaluation of the Soviet ruble would cost the United States an additional $742,000 to maintain its diplomatic mission in Moscow in the next fiscal year. The primary purpose of the decree, he thought, was not to harass foreigners but to create the fictitious impression that the Soviet economy had strengthened against the rest of the world.

3. He reported that some key American businessmen, notably in utility and banking fields, were having trouble getting exit permits from Communist China, although all officials in Shanghai, including the embassy staff, had their permits already. The present hope is to evacuate about 300 Americans by ship, perhaps toward the end of this month.

4. He again rebuked the Chinese Nationalists for their blockade of Communist ports and for their efforts to enforce it by attacks on American shipping.

The Secretary's statement about Chinese Nationalist representation in the U. N. was prompted by the latest of the Soviet walkouts over the Chinese issue—this time a boycott of the executive board of the International Children's Emergency Fund.

Arguing that this action followed "a now familiar pattern," the Secretary said the Russians were refusing to join in "collective efforts to promote human welfare" simply because they could not get majority support for their own position on the Chinese issue.

"Thus," he said, "the Soviet Union has again demonstrated that it regards the United Nations less as an agency to advance human well-being than as a forum to con-

Truman to Attend Largest Party Rally Since Convention

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman and most, perhaps all, of his Cabinet are expected to attend a Democratic strategy meeting and rally in Chicago on May 15.

Hailed by Democratic National Chairman William M. (Bill) Boyle as the "most important political event of the 1950 campaign," it will be the biggest assemblage of governmental and party leaders ever seen except at a national convention.

Plans for the meeting are not much less ambitious than those usually made for a national convention. Already 2500 Chicago hotel rooms have been reserved by the Democratic National Committee. The Chicago Stadium probably will be reserved for the rally.

The President and Chairman Boyle are determined that 1950 is not going to be another 1946, politically speaking. Mr. Truman always has felt that the loss of Congress to the Republicans in '46 was a "calamity." With that setback in mind, he reminded those at the recent Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner that congressional elections are just as important as presidential elections.

Mr. Truman himself is prepared for a major role in the 1950 campaign, and the country will see a lot of him before ballots are cast in November.

One speaking tour will come in May, just before or just after the Chicago rally. He is expected to attend a dedication ceremony at the Grand Coulee Dam in the State of Washington. The trip will be made by train, which will give Mr. Truman an opportunity to make whistle-stop speeches from the rear platform of his private car, the Ferdinand Magellan.

It was on a trip to Grand Coulee on June 9, 1948, that the Chief Executive made one of his most spectacular remarks. At Spokane, he said that the Eightieth Congress was the "worst" Congress in the history of the Republic. Later that day, standing before the tremendous fall of the Coulee Dam, he amended this by saying that it was only the second-worst. He said that the "Thad Stevens Congress" of reconstruction days was "a little worse."

The forthcoming Chicago powwow actually will open on Saturday, May 13, with a meeting of the Democratic National Committee. The "gigantic rally," at which Mr. Truman is expected to speak, will come two nights later. It is to this that all Cabinet officers have been invited.

Stockade Prisoners Perish In Blaze and Explosion

Albuquerque, N. Mex., March 8 (AP).—Fourteen armed forces prisoners died tonight and two others were critically injured in a flash fire that swept through a temporary building at Sandia secret weapons base.

Five other persons were overcome by smoke which billowed over the L-shaped mobilization frame structure.

The prisoners were in three or four cellblocks in the prison at the base on the eastern outskirts of Albuquerque.

Sandia base is a part of the armed forces' secret weapons project.

The atomic bomb is assembled there.

The prisoners were believed to represent all three armed forces.

First reports said the building was demolished by an explosion.

Later, base officials said it was in ruins from a fire, the origin of which has not been determined.

The prisoners were all believed alive when taken from the structure. They died en route to hospitals or after arrival there.

Base ambulances and fire crews were called. No civilian agencies were alerted for the emergency at the secret base, which works with the Atomic Energy Commission.

Names of those killed and injured were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Maj. Kenneth Kolster, public information officer, said the prisoners were serving varying terms for various offenses.

Two guards, two officers and three civilian firemen were overcome by the black smoke which billowed over the structure.

The guards were Corpl. Richard A. Miller and Pvt. Wilbur Henry (ages, home addresses unavailable). The officers were Lieut. Stephen H. Perry, police and prison officer, and Lieut. Col. Ralph Tolve, provost marshal. The three civilians were not identified.

The blaze was spotted at 7:35 p. m.

Acting Commanding Officer Col. Kenner F. Hertford took personal charge of rescue and firefighting operations in the absence of Sandia Commandant Gen. Robert M. Montague, away on official business.

The prison building was heated by oil-burning Deisel-type stoves. It is one of the last old-type structures on the base so heated.

Cause of the deaths was listed as suffocation and burns.

Sandia's atomic energy work is connected with the activities of the Los Alamos atomic laboratory, some 60 miles to the north. It also is allied with nearby Kirtland Base, the air force's special weapons project command headquarters.

40 Quarreling Minutes

Mr. 14's Loyalty or Lack of It Embroils Tydings, McCarthy

An internal contradiction in Senator McCarthy's (R., Wis.) charges of Communist infiltration into the State Department apparently lay at the bottom of the long wrangle that initiated the presentation of his charges yesterday.

At the opening session of the investigation, before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) demanded whether McCarthy was going to make a separate case against a "high ranking State Department official" mentioned in one of the cases McCarthy discussed in the Senate on February 20.

Did McCarthy know his name, and if so, would he tell it to the subcommittee, publicly or in closed session, Tydings demanded.

For 40 quarreling minutes, McCarthy insisted he was not prepared on this case and would give full information later. Tydings persisted, saying he could at least give yes or no answers on the two simple questions.

This case, No. 14 in McCarthy's February 20 listing, seemed to him the "most important" of all, Tydings insisted.

What he did not say, but what he certainly had in mind, was the same high-ranking official whom McCarthy denounced in case 14 as trying to protect a loyalty suspect praised by McCarthy the same day in case No. 41. He indicated the official was a martyr who had

Crow Flock Tires Of Bucking Gale, Travels on Foot

Council Bluffs, Iowa, March 8 (AP).—A flock of about 50 crows, prevented by an 82-mile-an-hour wind from flying across a road, finally gave up and walked.

Conservation Officer Ward Garrett reported seeing this unusual sight during a blizzard yesterday. He described it this way:

The crows were flying about two feet off the ground and when they tried to gain altitude to cross the road the wind blew them back. After repeated attempts, the birds took to the ground, climbed the side of the grading and marched stoically across the road.

Sikang Capital Reported Retaken, Hainan Saved

Taipei, March 8 (AP).—China's Nationalists today claimed the biggest success on the mainland since Formosa became the symbol of resistance last December—the capture of Kangting, capital of Sikang Province.

An official dispatch said the far western city was wrested from turncoat Nationalists March 5.

This development, coupled with the smashing of a raid by 900 Reds on the big south China island of Hainan, bucked up morale on Formosa.

Kangting is about 150 air miles north of Sichang, a mountain town which is the main base for Nationalist guerilla warfare on the mainland. Two guerilla armies of regulars are based on Sichang.

Cloture Petition Signed

Senate Lays Aside DP Bill Until March 31; to Limit Talk

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday unanimously agreed to lay aside displaced persons legislation until March 31 and then strictly limit any further debate.

The decision came unexpectedly near the end of the ninth day of bitter controversy over the relative merits of the so-called McCarran bill and the more liberal Kilgore substitute.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), who on Monday charged a "filibuster" was in progress, proposed the 23-day postponement after circulating a cloture petition to shut off further debate.

The petition was signed by 16 Senators, two more than the number required to put cloture to a test, but Lucas never laid it before the Senate.

The cloture "club" nonetheless helped him to work out the postponement compromise, one informant said.

Under the unanimous consent agreement, the displaced persons bill will again become the pending business of the Senate on Friday, March 31. Lucas announced, however, that actual voting on the bill and amendments would not start before the following Monday, April 3.

The agreement limits further DP debate to "30 minutes to a side" on the bill and each amendment. That means a possible hour's debate on every amendment to the bill, and on top of that an-

Ex-Judge Hurls Lie at McCarthy's 'Red' Charge

Miss Dorothy Kenyon Denies Affiliations As Senators Clash Over Procedure

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In a stormy Senate hearing, full of angry repartee and partisan jockeying, Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) yesterday began presentation of information to support his charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department.

His first case was an added starter to the 81 he outlined in a Senate speech on February 20. It dealt with Miss Dorothy Kenyon, former New York Municipal Court Judge and former United States representative to the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women.

McCarthy said she had a long record of "Communist activities" and has been affiliated with at least 28 organizations officially labelled as subversive.

Tydings Enters Fray

From New York, where Miss Kenyon is now in private law practice, she promptly retorted that McCarthy is "an unmitigated liar."

In a session of more than two hours before a special subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee set up to look into his charges, McCarthy was able to complete only four pages of a ten-page statement he had prepared on Miss Kenyon. There were two reasons for the slow going.

First, Subcommittee Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) wrangled with McCarthy and the Republican members of the subcommittee, Lodge (Mass.) and Hickenlooper (Iowa) for 40 minutes in an attempt to get McCarthy to discuss another case. It was, Tydings insisted, the "most important" of the 81 McCarthy had mentioned.

Could Lead to Unfairness

Second, McCarthy ran up against committee procedure of a sort that Lodge accurately labelled as "most extraordinary and unusual." It took the form of an on-the-spot and immediate examination by Tydings and his Democratic colleagues, Senators Green (R. I.) and McMahon (Conn.), of each piece of evidence on Miss Kenyon that McCarthy offered as an exhibit.

Usually, in congressional committees, evidence presented is not commented on, nor the witness queried in detail on the evidence, until he has finished his presentation.

Tydings made it clear nothing of the sort would be done in these hearings. For, he and McMahon repeatedly asserted, this could lead to gross unfairness.

Evidence presented with a "one-

Liberals Decide To Vote Against Attlee on Steel

London, March 8 (AP).—The British Press Association said the nine Liberals in Commons decided tonight to vote against the Labor government in its first Parliament test Thursday.

Labor could survive, however, by bringing out its full forces in Commons, where it has a slim seven-seat majority.

There was no evidence that the Liberals hoped to bring about an immediate downfall of the government of Prime Minister Attlee and a new election.

Badly buffeted in the election of February 23, the Liberals need time to muster money and an organization to fight in the next one. Also, they relish their role of buffer between Labor and the Conservatives.

The vote will come on a virtual motion of censure of the government. The issue is whether Labor should have laid aside plans for state ownership of the iron and steel industry—as Winston Churchill contends—in view of the election returns.

Racket Probe Funds Delayed by Dispute

The Kefauver resolution authorizing a full-scale Senate investigation of organized crime yesterday ran into a jurisdictional tangle as rival Senate committees claimed the right to make the $100,000 inquiry.

The Judiciary Committee, empowered by the resolution to make the sweeping "Tygoon" investigation, was challenged by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee at a Senate Rules Committee hearing.

In the end, Rules Chairman Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) appointed a three-man subcommittee to try to untangle the snarl before the Rules group decides which committee should get funds for the inquiry.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), author of the original resolution cleared last week by the Judiciary Committee, said preliminary groundwork for the investigation has already been laid. He said a Judiciary Subcommittee would be ready to proceed "forthwith" once the Senate clears his resolution.

Johnson Claims Right

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, contended, however, that any interstate crime laws resulting would have to be handled by his committee. Unless his committee made the inquiry in the first place, he insisted there would have to be two investigations.

"If the Judiciary Committee gets $100,000 to conduct the Kefauver inquiry, we will be right back before the Rules Committee in a week or two asking $100,000 to make one of our own," said Johnson.

He said the projected "McGrath bills" to be recommended shortly by the Attorney General, covering probaly interstate transmission of race track information and shipment of slot machines and parts over State lines were "interstate matters" and must be referred to his group.

"Having that legislation, we would be one jump ahead of the Judiciary Committee, which would be looking for facts to base legislation on," said Johnson.

Crime Bills to Judiciary

Kefauver told the Rules group however that the Federal kidnapping law, the fugitive from justice law and other important Federal crime legislation has been handled in the past through the Judiciary Committee.

He argued further that administration and enforcement of Federal crime laws lies with the Justice Department, and thus come within jurisdiction of the Judiciary group.

Backing up Kefauver's position at the hearing were three other members of the Senate Judiciary Committee—Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), and Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.).

Rules Chairman Hayden appointed this subcommittee of "lawyers" to unsnarl the dispute: Senators John C. Stennis (D., Miss.), Guy M. Gillette (D., Ia.), and Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kans.).

The subcommittee had reached no decision last night, but one member of it said he did not see how the Rules group can do otherwise than clear the Kefauver resolution. This informant said the time for Johnson to have claimed jurisdiction was when the resolution was introduced and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Man Freed In Beef on Hamburger

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A beef about hamburger service, a counterman who could see no humor in the complaint, and a former State Department official yesterday formed the ingredients for a disorderly conduct case in Municipal Court.

The former State Department man, John Breckinridge, 32, of 2511 Q st. nw., once budget officer for the department and now a practicing attorney, was acquitted of the disorderly charge by Judge Frank H. Myers.

Trouble was dished up in short order after Breckinridge and a companion, Ray Greer, also of the Q st. address, entered Carl's Waffle Shop, 1234 Wisconsin ave. nw., about 3 a. m. last February 9.

Breckinridge testified they ordered hamburgers three times with the counterman, Robert Frost, apparently ignoring them. In addition, the attorney said, Frost paid no attention to a request that the bun be toasted.

"If you don't like the hamburgers the way we serve them, don't eat them," Breckinridge quoted Frost as remarking.

At the same time, three or five policemen—the number differing according to various witnesses—were in the shop. Breckinridge testified he remarked facetiously: "It looks like the whole Seventh Precinct is here."

At this point, the lawyer asserted, Pvt. William R. Hyder tapped him on the back with his night stick anad inquired "what business is it of yours if the whole Seventh Precinct is here?

Breckinridge, who two years ago was on a District Bar Association subcommittee investigating police activities, testified he replied: "It is none of my business but I'll say so if I want to."

Thereupon, he declared the officer jerked him from his seat, hustled him outside, called the wagon. The lawyer put up $5 collateral at the precinct station later to secure his release.

Hyder testified that Breckinridge grew abusive in the shop and cursed the officer.

Defense Attorney John Kendrick quoted Police Chief Robert J. Barrett as saying that "many precincts are understaffed and that the Seventh Precinct has only 69 officers." Yet, the lawyer declared, anywhere from three to five were in "that one place."

Bill Provides 5-Day Week For Policemen

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) yesterday urged a five-day week for Washington policemen, including those of the Metropolitan, Park and White House police.

The police now have a six-day week. Davis introduced a bill calling for the shorter work week in the first legislative outgrowth of the hearings he has been conducting on Washington crime and law enforcement.

As chairman of the special committee investigating District crime, Davis heard top police officials say that the six-day work week is one of the main reasons for the difficulty they have experienced in recruiting enough men to bring the department to full authorized strength.

D.C. Policeman Suspended

Police Pvt. David M. Brown, 24 years on the police force, was suspended early yesterday on a charge of drinking while on duty.

Lieut. David O. Fletcher of the Eighth Precinct reported to headquarters that Brown failed to report off duty at the stationhouse at midnight Tuesday night.

He said he found Brown 25 minutes later under the influence of intoxicants in the office of the assistant manager at the Shoreham Hotel. Brown was suspended immediately.

The 48-year-old police private, who lives at 732 Roxboro pl. nw., has received seven commendations during his police career.

had visited him on the afternoon of January 31 and told him that the subcommittee was interested in the lack of gambling arrests in the Third and Seventh Precincts.

According to Richitt, Warring indicated he got the information from Barrett, and referred to Barrett as "the boss." In subsequent testimony, Barrett said he was not aware of the subcommittee's interest in the matter until February 1. Warring denied calling Barrett "the boss."

The dates of January 31 and February 1 assumed prime importance at the congressional hearings. Richitt said and Barrett denied, that Barrett had asked Richitt on January 31 to prepare a report on gambling arrests in the Third Precinct.

The subcommittee held hearings on the Richitt charges last Friday and Saturday, but never did get to the bottom of the date tangle. The erasure disclosure apparently had bearing on the date conflict.

To the naked eye, the entry in the police signal book showed that Richitt called his precinct at 8:40 a. m. January 31, from a box at 18th and L sts. nw., Maher said.

Chemical treatment of the entry under infra red light, Maher said, showed that erasures had eliminated an entry which indicated Richitt had called at that time on that date from a box at 20th and P sts.

Richitt last night reiterated his previous testimony that he had called from 18th and L sts nw., and said he had two witnesses to prove it.

Richitt flatly denied making the erasures.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay has been given transcripts of each day's testimony before the crime inquiry for study.

Maher opened the press conference by reading from a release which he said was approved by Chairman James C. Davis, (D., G.) of the crime subcommittee.

The release stated that Davis, Subcommittee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach, Barrett, and Sergt. Louis Peters, Barrett's aide, discussed "certain documentary evidence which had come to light" on Tuesday.

Portions of the release as read by Maher:

"Examination of these documents was made by a handwriting and ink identification expert not connected with the police department. . . . This afternoon Barrett and Maher conferred with Davis with respect to the evidence in their possession.

"Davis has conferred with the members of the subcommittee and they are of the opinion that this committee should not hold public hearings on the subject matter of the testimony given last Friday and Saturday.

Not in Jurisdiction

"The committee is of the opinion that any further action with respect to these matters is not within the jurisdiction of the committee but is within the jurisdiction of the District government.

"Davis has informed Barrett that he and the District government are free to take any course of action that they may deem proper."

Representative Davis later confirmed he had authorized the statement.

"Yesterday morning (Tuesday) at approximately 11 o'clock," Maher continued reading from another statement, "Major Barrett received information from a member of the Police Department that on Saturday (March 4) at approximately 4 o'clock he was listening to a broadcast of the proceedings before the subcommittee."

CAPT. ANTHONY RICHITT
Denies making erasure

PVT. ERNEST REID
Has no comment

Pvt. Reid Mentioned

"In the course of the broadcast" the officer stated he heard Fischbach ask how soon it would take Pvt. Ernest N. Reid to bring the patrol signal system book from Third Precinct to the Capitol."

The officer who called Maj. Barrett is assigned to the Third Precinct, Maher said, but refused to identify him by name. He went to the precinct to be sure the 4 o'clock roll call was on the book before it was taken away.

Informant Quoted

Maher continued to read from the statement which summarized the police-officer-informant's report.

"When he looked at the book for January 31, 1950 he observed certain erasures had been made on the first line of the page following the name of Captain Richitt. He observed an erasure had been made on the second line and the third line of the book. The erasures had apparently been effected by an ink eradicator.

"This book was placed in the possession of Major Barrett," Maher continued," at 2:10 p. m., yesterday. It was then that Major Barrett and other persons went to Davis' office. Thereafter this book was sent to the handwriting and ink identification expert."

Maher said the expert reported that: "Erasures were made with a chemical ink eradicator in the first column after the name of Captain Richitt and the initial A, before the name of Sergeant Gernhofer and before the name of Corporal Clausy."

At this point Maher told reporters "Now this is the important part of the whole thing."

Point Emphasized

Opposite the line "Captain Richitt," Maher said the handwriting expert report showed, the notation "32—8:40" appeared before the erasures.

The significance of the eradicated portion opposite Richitt's name, Maher told reporters was that "Box 32 is located at 20th and P sts. nw."

Richitt testified on Friday and Saturday that he pulled box 12, at 18th and L sts., exactly at 8:40 on January 31. Reid corroborated this statement.

"Now the eradicated part opposite Richett's name shows that he actually called from Box 32 at exactly the same time he testified he called from Box 12," Maher said.

Maher said that two "sets" of ink eradicators were taken from the Third Precinct yesterday and were in the possession of the Police Department. One set was taken from Reid's desk, Maher said, and the other from on top of another desk.

Police Corrections

The Police Manual prescribes that all corrections made on any police records shall be made by drawing a line in red ink through the portion to be corrected, Maher said. "I can't see what use there would be for ink eradicator sets, in view of that provision in the manual," Maher said.

Reid was summoned to headquarters at noon and seven hours later was still being questioned by Inspector Clarence E. Lutz.

Pvt. James Salt was assigned to the switchboard and the Patrol Signal Book in the Third Precinct on January 31, Maher said.

Salt made a 13-page statement to Maher, Fischbach and Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, Maher said.

Statement By Salt

Reading from Salt's statement, Maher said that Salt had denied making the erasures, but admitted making entries in the book.

"It is the opinion of the handwriting expert that the notation '32—8:40' (the original notation) was in Salt's handwriting," Maher said.

Salt said he has never used ink eradicator, Maher said.

Salt told police department investigators that on March 4 he received a card asking him to contact Reid, Maher said. Salt said he was off Sunday and did not see Reid until Monday, March 6. Maher said Salt told of asking Reid what he wanted, and said that Reid answered, "It is all over now."

"I wanted you to collaborate (sic) something," Maher said Salt quoted Reid.

Conference With Reid

Maher continued with a description of a conference he had Monday with Reid, who was Captain Richitt's Third Precinct secretary in the presence of Fischbach, and John F. Woog, assistant counsel to the crime inquiry.

Reid stated that Salt had admitted making the erasures, Maher said. Salt denied making any such statement during an interview with police investigators yesterday, Maher declared.

Reid told the investigators he first noticed erasures Friday night, March 3, Maher said.

Fischbach asked why he had not called the erasures to anyone's attention, and Reid replied that he thought the book wound be brought before the committee, Maher said.

Signal Book Moved

Reid said he had moved the signal book from its normal position behind a rail anl locked it in a file cabinet, Maher told reporters. Reid said he did this because he thought "something would come of the erasures," Maher reported.

Maher said Reid first denied having any ink eradicator and later admitted he had one set in his desk and another on top of his desk. Reid said he moved the eradicator from his desk in Richitt's office to a desk behind the rail in the main lobby of the precinct station, Maher said.

Richett Statement

Reid declined to comment on the press conference "at this time."

Captain Richitt insisted again last night that he made the call from the box at 18th and L sts. nw. on the morning of January 31.

"I was in Jack Leonard's place at 18th and L when I was notified to call the Major, and I went back to the box and called the Major," he said.

Captain Richitt said he has two witnesses to the fact that he made the call from that place.

"The Major then told me about his conversation with Maher and the conversation Maher had with Fischbach about the lack of gambling raids in No. 7 and No. 3 and the Major at that time asked me to make up some kind of a report.

"I have witnesses that I made the call there. Jack Leonard is one, and Pvt. Norman Richardson, who used to be in my precinct (he's now in No. 2 precinct), met me there to tell me about a conversation he had with Major Barrett that morning."

Here is a rundown on the date tangle.

Capt. Richitt said these things happened on January 31:

1. Barrett called on him by phone for a report some time near 9 a. m. on the gambling arrest figures.

2. Warring called on him in person and said he'd heard from Barrett that the committee was after the gambling arrest figures. This was about 4:10 p. m.

Barrett said it was February 1 when he received, from Committee Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) and Committee Counsel, his first notice that the committee wanted to know why there had been no gambling arrests in No. 3 and No. 7 in the 1949 fiscal year.

The conflicting statements pointed up a big "Who, How, and When."

Who told Warring the subcommittee wanted to know about the lack of gambling arrests in the Third and Seventh police precincts?

When was Warring told?

How was he told?

Barrett produced witnesses to prove he went to Richmond to speak at a luncheon club January 31. Barrett told the committee he did not make the call to Richitt described by the later.

He insisted February 1 was the date he called on both Richitt and Capt. Beverly C. Beach of No. 7 for the report on the gambling arrests in their precincts.

Both captains filed reports of gambling arrests in their precincts for the period since last June 30, not for the prior 12 months which the committee's request covered. Captain Beach's report was dated January 31.

Warring testified he went to see Richitt after talking to Captain Beach in a Georgetown jewelry store. Beach said he saw Warring on Wisconsin ave., and told him the major wanted a report on gambling arrests in No. 7. Beach denied he told Warring about the committee's interest.

Earlier yesterday House District Crime Subcommittee unexpectedly scheduled a hearing for 2 p. m., then cancelled it. It was believed that the erasure discovery was involved.

The hearing was called by Fischbach after he conferred with Barrett. It was cancelled by Chairman Davis, when he learned of it.

Fischbach explained that he had told District committee aides to advise the press of the hearing before he cleared the 2 p. m. time with members of the subcommittee. After the cancellation, Fischbach prepared to quit his Hotel Statler suite for a Florida vacation of at least two weeks. He said he planned to leave "immediately" by automobile with his wife and boxer dog, Skip.

Waring Impeachment Petition Is Prepared

Representative Hare (D., S. C.) said last night a proposed resolution to seek the impeachment of United States Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston, S. C., has been prepared.

Hare told a reporter that if the resolution is introduced it will be presented to the House by Representative Rivers (D., S. C.). He said he knows of no final decision as to whether it will be offered.

U. S. May Have Saved Shipkov From Death

Red China Curbed

600 Strategic Goods Put on Control List

By The Associated Press

The Commerce Department yesterday slapped export controls on 600 more kinds of strategic goods to keep them out of Red China and other areas where the Soviets might get their hands on them.

The order takes effect March 20. It covers certain types of electrical, mining and construction machinery, industrial chemicals, and alloy metals and minerals. They can't go out of the western hemisphere—even to such friendly countries as Australia—without this Government's permission.

Yesterday's order reinforces one issued last November that requires export licenses for such strategical important items as large electric motors, generators, transmission and distribution equipment, and X-ray apparatus when they are shipped to any destination in the world except Canada.

The State and Defense Departments, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the National Security Resources Board took part in the decision to tighten up controls on articles that might be of prime value in a nation's preparations for war.

Up till November, export licenses were required only on strategic goods shipped to Europe and adjacent Mediterranean areas—the regions through which it was then figured the goods might leak through behind the Iron Curtain.

Now, with the cold war embracing the whole world, the restrictions are being tightened.

Secretary Acheson yesterday praised the courage of Michael Shipkov in telling of his torture and entrapment at the hands of the Bulgarian Communist militia.

A few hours after receiving news of Shipkov's 15-year sentence, the Secretary read a statement saying that Shipkov "has set an example which must not be lost."

"His act of faith should be made to serve the cause of freedom for which he intended it," the Secretary said.

Shipkov's life may have been saved by the State Department's release last Sunday of the affidavit he wrote in the American Legation at Sofia four months ago.

There were great soul-searchings in Government offices here over the wisdom of publishing the Shipkov statement while he was still alive.

Some officials thought the publication might involve the young Bulgarian translator in more fiendish tortures and perhaps death. Others argued that Shipkov himself had asked to have the affidavit published, and that it could do no harm to show the Bulgarian government and people that the eyes of the world were on them.

In the end the decision was made to publish, and to get the story by every possible means, especially by "Voice of America" broadcasts, to the Bulgarians themselves.

The fact that Shipkov got a prison term instead of instant execution may well have been a result of the publication of his story, although there is, of course, no way to prove that it was.

Certainly the Bulgarian authorities showed they were bothered by the American broadcasts about Shipkov's affidavit. Ever since Sunday the Bulgarian home radio has pounded away at the story that he was a "spy" and that he was not tortured, as his affidavit said he was.

And while a prison term in any police-state is a terrible thing, it at least leaves a crumb of hope that Skipkov may survive.

Secretary Acheson's statement yesterday was not only a tribute to Skipkov but an official hint that the United States would use his case at the United Nations as proof of the denial of human rights in Bulgaria.

"On Sunday, March 5, 1950, through the press and radio, people throughout the world, including those in countries where freedom is suppressed, read or heard the story of Michael Skipkov," the Secretary said.

"The statement of this Bulgarian citizen and employe of the American Legation, describing his experience in the hands of the Bulgarian Communist militia, documents for the free world how individuals of moral integrity can be broken and made to serve the interests of those who hold the reins of power in a police state."

Acheson went on to say that the Shipkov affidavit proved the falsity of the indictment against him and also proved the falsity of the "confession" he later made to the Communist authorities.

"Michael Shipkov foresaw clearly that he could not resist the Bulgarian militia's methods of torture if he should fall again into their hands," he said. "It was for this reason, among others, that he prepared his affidavit and requested the Legation to make it public."

"It should be made absolutely clear," the Secretary said, "that the true facts in his case are those written by him while still a free man and not those being forced out of him now to serve the purposes of the Communist authorities . . .

Disregard for Rights

"The people of the free world cannot but be deeply troubled by the disregard for human rights and human values shown by those forces in Bulgaria which now have control over the fate of Michael Shipkov, just as they were troubled at the time these same forces carried out the judicial murder of Nikola Petkov, leader of the Bulgarian agrarian party, who was tried and executed in 1947."

In the Petkov case American official protests were of no avail, and the Bulgarian government of that day said American "interference" hastened Petkov's death.

Acheson also contrasted the police-state repression in Bulgaria with domestic freedom in neighboring Greece.

Asked to comment on the Greek election results, the Secretary said the United States had been absolutely neutral during the campaign, and he declined to comment on the present composition of the Greek parliament.

But he recalled that the Greek election had been conducted by a caretaker government, not one of whose members was a candidate; that voting was secret; that all the leading candidates called the election fair. He called it a demonstration of what a genuinely free people could do.

duct propaganda for its own particular purposes.

"If other United Nations members adopted the same arbitrary attitude, international cooperation would become impossible.

"On our part, we have stated that while we recognize the National government as the government of China and will vote against any attempt to unseat its delegates, we will accept the parliamentary decisions of United Nations organs on the matter."

The Secretary declared the Soviet walkouts would not prevent other U. N. members from continuing the normal work of the U. N. to the greatest possible extent. He ended by calling the latest Soviet walkout "all the more flagrant since the U. S. S. R. has never contributed any funds or materials to the Children's Fund."

Lie Suggests Plan To End China Deadlock

Lake Success, March 8 (NYHT).—Secretary General Trygve Lie has proposed a new formula for breaking the United Nations deadlock over Chinese representation—namely, thta U. N. organs should recognize the government which exercises "effective authority" within a country and is "habitually obeyed by the bulk of the population."

The formula was generally regarded by observers here as a bid for recognition of the Chinese Communists as China's U. N. representatives, since they control the mainland in China's civil war. The proposal was handed to all permanent U. N. delegations today.

The U. N. has been boycotted by the Soviet Union and its Cominform associates for the last two months. The Soviet bloc has threatened to stay out so long as the Chinese Nationalists remain.

Dr. T. F. Tsiang, Chinese Nationalist delegate, conferred with Lie after receiving the memorandum and issued a statement denouncing it as "a deliberate attempt to prejudice China's case before the U. N.

"It oversteps the duties of the Secretary General and undermine public confidence in his impartiality," Dr. Tsiang said. "The present deadlock in the U. N. was caused by the Soviet walkout, which is illegal. If the Secretary General wishes to exercise his influence, it should be in the direction of the Soviet delegation. The memorandum is both bad law and bad politics."

Lie's memorandum contended it was not necessary for governments to recognize another regime diplomatically in order to work with it in the U. N. Linking of representation with recognition, it said, was "unfortunate from the practical standpoint and wrong from the standpoint of legal theory."

The document noted that Yemen and Burma, for instance, had been unanimously admitted to U. N. membership by the Assembly at a time when only a minority had recognized them.

Laborites Hit In Commons Over Seretse

London, March 8 (AP). — Opposition leaders attacked today the Labor Government's decision to exile the Oxford-educated Negro chief of the Bamangwatos, who has made a white London typist his queen.

Conservative Winston Churchill and Liberal Clement Davies alike questioned the handling of the case.

The chief himself, 27-year-old Seretse Khama, announced here Monday he had learned he would not be permitted to return to his tribe of 150,000 natives, the biggest in British Bechuanaland, for five years. He charged the Britsh invitation to him last month to come to London for a discussion of his status was a trick.

"Why won't they let me return?" he asked. "The people want me.

"I intend to go back pretty soon—in a matter of days. Maybe they will send a platoon of troops in. If I do go back and get into the territory it will be easy for me, because the tribes will be on my side."

Patrick Gordon-Walker, the commonwealth affairs secretary, told the House of Commons the denied that Seretse's marriage to the white woman, Ruth Williams, 24, entered into the government's decision. He denied it was taken as a result of conferences with South Africa, whose Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan advocates segregation of whites and blacks.

Seretse's wife, who is pregnant, chose to stay in the tribe's clayhut capital, Serowe. Gordon-Walker said he had offered to have her flown back to London. He denied he had threatened to have her removed from Bechuanaland.

Dutch Order Expulsion Of 2 Czech Diplomats

The Hague, March 8 (U.P.).—The Dutch government ordered the expulsion of two Czech diplomats today in retaliation for Czechoslovakia's ouster of three Dutch diplomats.

The Dutch officials gave attache Miss M. Luvova and chancellory employe Miss R. Palova eight days to leave The Hague.

Shipkov Given 15-Year Term As U. S. Spy

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 8 (AP).—Michael Shipkov was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment today after a two-day spy trial in which he disavowed a statement the United States State Department said revealed how Communist police wring confessions from prisoners.

Shipkov, 39-year-old former Bulgarian interpreter for the now-closed United States Legation, pleaded guilty to espionage. Witnesses described him as the spying "eyes and ears" of United States Minister Donald Heath, who left the country with his staff last week in a break of diplomatic relations.

Prosecutor Petko Petrinski refrained from asking the death penalty. He urged the court to return a "just but strict verdict." The court president himself called the sentence "exceedingly lenient."

Four other Bulgarian defendants drew these sentences:

Miss Jivka Rindova, 32, former telephone operator at the legation, 12 years.

Stefan Kratunkov, 23, anti-Communist, 10 years.

Nicola Tsanov, 23, alleged former member of a fascist youth organization, 6 years, 8 months.

Vassil Malchev, 19, student, 4 years, 5 months and 10 days.

All pleaded guilty to espionage.

Aides Were Innocent Of Spying, Heath Says

New York, March 8 (U.P.).—Donald R. Heath, recalled United States Minister to Bulgaria, said today that Michael Shipkov and Jivka Rindova, Bulgarians convicted of spying for the United States, are "innocent of anything you call espionage."

He denied that he had asked them, or any other legation employe to spy for him and termed their conviction "another of those continuing tragedies."

Heath arrived from Europe aboard the liner Queen Elizabeth.

The Minister said he received Shipkov's recently published statement on Communist methods of torture last August. Heath sent it to the State Department, and it was released last Sunday.

"It was a true and moving account of what had happened," Heath said. "He wrote it out first, and later it was amplified in conversation."

Two Soviet Officials Accuse U. S., British of 'A-Blackmail'

Moscow, March 8 (U.P.).—Two high Soviet officials today attacked the "atomic blackmail" policy of the United States and Britain and said it could end only in failure.

In campaign speeches for next Sunday's election to the Supreme Soviet (Parliament), both emphasized Russia's mastery of atomic weapons.

The speakers were Nikita Khrushchev, member of the Politburo, and Mikhail Suslov, central committee secretary.

Khrushchev said "warmongers tried to use atomic energy to frighten nations" but that "nothing resulted from the so-called atomic diplomacy and nothing will result.

"The adventurous atomshiks again miscalculated in supposing the United States alone possessed atomic weapons. The fact that our country mastered atomic energy testifies the great success of our Soviet science and immense industrial power of the Soviet state."

Suslov said Soviet science had succeeded in the Stalinist task of catching up and surpassing the achievements of science abroad.

Mexico Bans Divorces For Nonresidents

Mexico City, March 8 (U.P.).—Quick Mexican divorces for Hollywood movie stars and other alien nonresidents were abolished by the Supreme Court today.

In a 9-to-7 decision the court placed jurisdiction in divorce suits with the civil judge at the couple's legal residence, rather than with the judge where the suit is filed.

French Lights Shine Despite 'Walkout'

Runners Up?

3 Parties Seek to Take Greek Rule

Athens, March 8 (AP).—The leaders of three parties in Greece's close parliamentary race pushed today for a cabinet which would give the premiership to moderate leftist leader Nicholas Plastiras, but might leave no plums for the winning Populists.

An agreement in principle on a new government was made at a meeting of Plastiras, head of the National Progressive Union; Social Democratic Leader George Papandreou, and Liberal Leader Sophocles Venizelos.

The plan hinges on the probability that Constantin Tsaldaris, Populist Party leader, will be unable to form a government despite his slim election victory. It calls for appointment of Papandreou and Venizelos as vice premiers.

An announcement said the leaders had agreed that the election results showed the people wanted a coalition headed by their three parties.

There were reports, however, that some of Venizelos' Liberal followers are planning to withdraw their support.

With returns in from all but 34 civilian precincts, the Interior Ministry count still gave the Populists a slight lead with 268,490 votes. Other returns:

National Progressive Union—255,751.

Social Democrats—157,359.

Republican Front—153,465.

Returns from some of the army's polling places were still delayed.

Paris (Thursday) March 9 (AP).—Government draft orders kept electric and gas services functioning throughout France early today despite a general strike called by utility workers' unions.

The unions had ordered their 100,000 members to strike at midnight. There was no immediate curtailment of services, however.

In Paris and other large cities the walkout apparently was buckling under to requisitions issued earlier by the Commerce and Industry Ministry to key workers. The requisitions amounted to a civilian draft, with penalties as high as five years in jail for refusal to work.

Paris night life rolled on in its accustomed gaiety with never a flicker. Street lights, both electric and gas, shone normally. Householders and restaurants said their gas stoves were functioning as usual.

Reports from Marseille—where there was a temporary electricity cut last night before the strike was supposed to start—and from Nice and Le Harve were the same: lights and gas functioning as usual. A full complement of night workers appeared for duty in Marseille plants.

Utilities also were working normally at Lille, an industrial center near the Belgian frontier.

Some labor leaders asserted they would defy the Government's requisition orders which they claimed were illegal. There was no sign yet of any such defiance.

Early yesterday the National Assembly approved a controversial anti-sabotage bill over bitter Communist opposition.

Three non-Communist unions joined the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor in calling the gas and power strike. Behind them stood a referendum that gave an 85 percent majority for the stoppage unless the Government grants a basic wage of $10,500 francs ($30) a month and a 3000-franc ($8.50) increase down the line.

A non-Communist union leader said the unions, both Communist and otherwise, would go ahead with their walkout.

The antisabotage bill was approved 393 to 186 after a heated Assembly session climaxed by fist fights.

Prophetic Factor in Crash . . .

STRUCK BY PLANE—The flagpole in Fort Snelling National Cemetery was struck by the Northwest Airlines plane which crashed and killed 15 persons in Minneapolis, Minn. Officials said the pole tore a wing off the plane

Minneapolis, March 8 (AP).—A cemetery flagpole which reached into a snow-filled night sky was labelled by Northwest Airlines officials today as the cause of a plane crash which took 15 lives.

The Martin 2-0-2 was knocked out of control by the pole and plummeted into three homes in South Minneapolis last night.

NWA operations officials said one of the main supports of the plane's left wing was severely damaged when it smashed against the steel finger, towering 67 feet 7¾ inches over Fort Snelling National Cemetery. The cemetery is near Wold Chamberlain Airport where the plane was attempting to land during a blizzard.

[The address of one crash victim, Miss Mathilde DeBeck, was given as Arlington, Va., but no confirmation of that address could be obtained. Miss DeBeck had worked for the Indian Bureau of the Interior Department as a teacher in North Dakota and New Mexico from 1926 to 1944, when she resigned. She boarded the plane in Cleveland to visit a relative in Rochester, Minn.]

Austria Asks Occupation End, Easing of Police Measures

Vienna, March 8 (U.P.).—Austria, in a note to the Big Four powers—a note really aimed at Russia—has asked a reduction in the size of Allied occupation forces, the ending of oppressive police measures and the prompt signing of a peace treaty, it was announced today.

The note asked also that Russia, Great Britain and France follow the lead of the United States and pay the costs of their occupation forces.

Foreign Minister Karl Gruber, addressing a full-dress meeting of Parliament on the budget, said that he had sent a 23-point note to the United States, Britain, France and Russia on the occupation situation. Russia, he commented, "didn't even bother to answer."

Demands in the note aimed directly at Russia include:

1. Immediate stoppage of arrests of Austrians by "one or more of the four powers."

2. Granting to Austrian police the right to arrest occupation troops who commit crimes and to use firearms if necessary in making the arrests.

3. Abolition of all Allied controls such as road blocks and other restrictions against traveling among the occupation zones.

4. Halting of Allied interference with Austrian processes of law, the operation of the postal, telephone and telegraph administration, radio broadcasting, education, police affairs and affairs of the ministry of interior.

5. Stopping the practice of banning and confiscating Austrian newspapers.

6. The immediate derequisitioning of housing for occupation troops.

Former N. Y. Judge Calls McCarthy Liar

sided" interpretation, Tydings said, would be broadcast with that interpretation throughout the country, with never a chance of complete correction.

The charges would go on page one in all papers, McMahon said. If they were unfair charges, and were refuted only later, the answer would never catch up in the public mind. The refutation would appear on "page 17 or page 47," and much later, McMahon added.

"These charges are going out all over the country," Tydings said at one point. "The evidence must go out in full, or else the public can never draw the proper conclusion."

Other Names Noted

Accordingly, with each of the first three exhibits McCarthy offered, identifying Miss Kenyon with a subversive organization along with well-known Communists, Tydings and Green read other names shown on the exhibit as sponsors. They included Senators and Representatives and other distiguished and prominent public figures.

McMahon harried McCarthy with demands to state when the subversive organizations with which Miss Kenyon was connected were declared by the Justice Department to be subversive. Was Miss Kenyon connected with them only before that time, or afterward as well, McMahon wanted to know.

McCarthy said he did not have the dates. McMahon said he himself would supply them, because they made a great difference. Many innocent and well-meaning people joined organizations in good faith and left them after they were characterized by the Attorney General as subversive, McMahon commented.

"Front" Organizations

To this line of argument, McCarthy replied that it was perfectly true innocent people could have been, and were, duped into joining. After all, he said, these were "front" organizations; the Communists' whole purpose was to lure respectable persons into them.

He said that Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary of State, is listed by the House Un-American Activities Committee as a sponsor of the Congress of American Women, an alleged Communist front. McCarthy cited her as an example of how "well-meaning" people are "tricked" into lending their names to Red endeavors.

No such excuse can be made for Miss Kenyon, he asserted, because "her Communist activities are not only deep-rooted but extend back through the years."

"This lady has been affiliated with at least 28 Communist front organizations," McCarthy declared. Nine of the 28 have been labelled subversive by the Justice Department, he said, while the other 19 were so labelled by the Un-American Activities Committee.

Miss Kenyon's Affiliations

"It is inconceivable that this woman could collaborate with a score of organizations dedicated to the overthrow of our form of government by force and violence, participate in their activities, lend her name to their nefarious purposes and be ignorant of the whole sordid and un-American aspect of their work," McCarthy said.

He identified Miss Kenyon as being also United States member on the U. N. Commissions of the Economic and Social Council, with a salary of $12,000 a year.

He identified her as a sponsor of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, and a member of the board of sponsors of this organization who welcomed Hewlett Johnson, the "Red Dean" of Canterbury, to a Madison Square Garden rally.

Also, McCarthy said, Miss Kenyon was a sponsor of the American Russian Institute, also classed by the Attorney General as subversive. He mentioned that another sponsor was Phillip C. Jessup, Ambassador at Large and head of the State Department's Far Eastern Policy Board.

'Unusual Affinity' of Jessup

McCarthy said that he would discuss at a later point in the inquiry the "unusual affinity" of Jessup for "Communist causes."

McCarthy's statement included a dozen or more other organizations with which Miss Kenyon was connected, and all of which were officially branded as subversive.

Miss Kenyon's term as United States representative on the U. N. Status of Women Commission expired January 1, this year. She was not reappointed. The State Department said that though her salary was $12,000 a year, she was paid only for time served at the U. N. which was usually only about two weeks a year.

In New York, Miss Kenyon said yesterday that McCarthy "is using the cowardly device of sheltering behind his congressional immunity to evade the legal consequences of his action."

"I am happy to be associated with Philip Jessup and I am sure he must agree with me that Senator McCarthy is an unmitigated liar," she continued.

DOROTHY KENYON
Denies charges

"I am not a sponsor of Russian organizations and I would never have dreamed of sponsoring the coming of the Red Dean to this country," she said.

"I saw the list of organizations which Senator McCarthy mentioned and most of them I never heard of. Some of them I vaguely recall as having made speeches before, as I have made speeches all of my life.

"As a decent, liberal American citizen, I am outraged by Senator McCarthy. He has proved by his outrageous and malicious charges that he knows nothing of sound Americanism."

As to her "pro-Communist" attitude, Miss Kenyon said:

"Let them ask Madame Popova (Eliziveta Popova, Russian delegate to the last session of the U. N. Commission on the Status of Women) whether she thinks Dorothy Kenyon is pro-Communist. She knows that I have done nothing but battle with her."

Yesterday's hearing found Lodge and Hickenlooper vigorously protesting the interruptions of McCarthy by the Democrats in their examination of his exhibits.

Lodge twice said it seemed to him as if it were a deliberate attempt to "rattle" and confuse McCarty. He had never seen such procedure, he went on, in which the witness was not allowed first to present his case.

"Kangaroo Court" to Lodge

He suggested normal procedure should be followed, with Senators taking turns questioning the witness after he had completed his statement. As it was going now, Lodge observed, McCarthy was being compelled to act as though he were in a "kangaroo court."

But Tydings rejected the idea of "later" examination of the evidence.

So when McCarthy gave as an exhibit a clipping from the Communist Daily Worker, showing Miss Kenyon a signer of a petition under the auspices of the Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, McMahon stepped in.

Why use as evidence a paper famed for its "genius for misrepresentation," he asked.

Tydings, meantime, began pointing out the other names on the petition, including former Manhattan Borough President Stanley Isaacs, Atomic Scientist Harold C. Urey and others.

Others Treated Similarly

Much the same thing happened with McCarthy's next two exhibits, accompanied by much the same protests from Lodge and Hickenlooper.

Tydings made little mention during the hearings of a controversial point at issue: whether he would subpena files from the executive departments on the loyalty of the individuals involved in the charges.

McCarthy insisted files would be necessary to get to the truth of the matter. He said four sets would be needed: those of the State Department loyalty agency, the State Department personnel files, the Civil Service Commission files and the FBI records.

Tydings gave no indication whether he would attempt to subpena them or not.

The hearings resume at 10:30 this morning.

Mrs. Acheson Paid $2 to Unit

Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary of State, paid $2 to the League of Women Shoppers about 10 years ago.

She may even have paid twice, the Secretary said, but she never heard of the Congress of American Women, with which the shoppers' league was afterward merged.

Her comment, as the Secretary relayed it to his press conference yesterday, was that her social position was going up, because the names of sponsors of the League of Women Shoppers sounded like a list out of the Social Register.

As for the Secretary, he said Senator McCarthy had made a contribution to the gayety of the country by mentioning Mrs. Acheson's name as an alleged sponsor of a subversive organization.

When he read the first reports of the McCarthy hearing, he said, he did what any good husband would do: he telephoned his wife to ask what she had been up to.

Mrs. Acheson hadn't the faintest idea of the organization McCarthy had named. Then, when she learned that this was a merger of the League of Women Shoppers and other groups, the news rang a bell, the Secretary said, and she remembered her $2 contribution.

At the start of his press conference, the Secretary told a story prompted by the McCarthy hearing. There was once a disturbance at a political meeting; someone telephoned the police to say that Communists were trying to break the meeting up.

The police arrived and began to break heads right and left. They even went onto the stage and cracked the chairman over the head. The chairman protested that he was an anti-Communist.

The police answered: We don't give a damn whether you're a Communist or an anti-Communist or what kind of Communist you are.

been fired from the State Department for his vigorous anti-Communist activity there.

The official, The Washington Post has learned, was Joseph Anthony Panuch, formerly Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Administration. He left the department on January 23, 1947. Subsequently, he became special adviser to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor in Germany.

In Case No. 14, McCarthy did not mention him by name. But he told how a "high State Department official" put pressure on employes to repudiate affidavits reflecting on the character of a State Department translator.

The Department's security agency recommended the translator's dismissal as a bad security risk in January, 1946, and he was terminated the next month. The files, McCarthy said, showed him to be flagrantly homosexual, and associated with others of like tendencies who were active members of Communist front organizations.

Later Reinstated

The translator was later reinstated.

But in Case No. 41, concerning an official allegedly associating closely with fellow travelers and Communists, McCarthy mentioned Panuch by name and said Panuch "made considerable efforts to get this man out of the State Department."

Panuch was unsuccessful, McCarthy continued. He had been doing a "housecleaning" job in the department, McCarthy went on, with a more or less free hand under Secretary of State Byrnes. But when General Marshall succeeded Byrnes, Marshall's first official act was to fire Panuch.

McCarthy continued, "obviously, General Marshall did not know anything about the situation. Some one of the underlings said, 'Get rid of this man.'

"It would seem to be only the logical thing that he would not, as his first official act, discharge a man unless the Undersecretary (at that time, Acheson. Editor's Note.) said, 'Get rid of him;' which is rather unusual.

"Here is one man who had tried to do the job of housecleaning and the ax falls."

At yesterday's hearings, Tydings insisted that the first thing to do was to suspend the "high official," if he were still in the State Department, pending an examination of Case 14.

Otherwise, Tydings suggested, the man could continue his nefarious work, falsifying perhaps the very files the subcommittee might need for its investigation.

He wrung from McCarthy the promise to answer his questions—whether he knew the name of the official and whether he would make a separate case against him—when next McCarthy appeared before the subcommittee, presumably at 10:30 this morning.

Judd Assails Acheson for Stand on Hiss

NYHT News Service

Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) accused Secretary of State Dean Acheson at a public hearing yesterday of undermining the State Department and his own usefulness by his January 25 statement on Alger Hiss.

Acheson, who flushed deeply but did not reply, told a press conference on January 25 that "I do not intend to turn my back on Alger Hiss."

Hiss, a former State Department official, had been sentenced that same day to five years in prison for perjury. He had been convicted of lying when he denied giving secret Government documents to a Communist spy ring.

On February 28 Secretary Acheson clarified his statement by telling the Senate Appropriations Committee that he did not condone the offense for which Hiss was convicted.

The incident yesterday came at the close of the Secretary's testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Korean aid legislation.

Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.) deplored the fact that some persons, including members of Congress, "use the State Department as a clay pigeon for political purposes." He warned that such attacks damaged American prestige abroad.

At this point Judd turned on Secretary Acheson, who was seated across the table from him.

"I also deplore the low state in which the department is held," he said, "but nobody has done as much as the Secretary himself to undermine the department and to undermine his own usefulness, although he is a brilliant, able man, as he did in his recent press conference statement."

As Acheson sat erect, his lips tightly pressed, his face crimson, Judd went on to say that he personally admired the sentiments in the Secretary's press conference statement. But he insisted that it had damaged Acheson's effectiveness.

Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, who was the next witness, warned Congress against slashing funds for the European Recovery Program.

The Administration is asking for an authorization of $2,950,000,000 for the ERP in the next fiscal year plus premission to spend 150 million dollars that will be saved out of current appropriations. It also is asking for a 100-million-dollar authorization for Korean aid.

Soviet Training Millions in Civil Defense

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Russia aims to give basic civil defense training to five million citizens each year, the Joint Atomic Energy Committee reported yesterday.

The committee made public a compendium of data on civil defense preparations—or lack of them—in each of the 48 States and the District as well as in foreign countries. The committee plans public hearings shortly.

On the Soviet Union, the report stated that a civil defense organization, known as Osaviakhil, was founded in the early 1920s and that it "has steadily expanded since 1935 when 2,760,000 took part in its exercises."

1,060,000 Units in Being

In 1947 some 20 million people took part, according to reports. In 1948, 1,060,000 local civil defense sections were in being and five million people received training.

As to Washington, the report noted the previously reported fact that the National Security Resources Board has been given (by President Truman) "a special relation" with the District. This is because NSRB is charged with planning the security of the National Capital which "in practice is inseparable from the civil defense of Washington as a municipality."

D. C. to Ask for Funds

The District Government has already begun to set a plan in motion and shortly will ask Congress for funds to staff an office.

Many States have done nothing on civilian defense, the report showed, and in some cases proposals were defeated at recent sessions of the legislatures. Others have taken preliminary steps, sometimes by action of the Governor.

Senate Delays Action on DP Bill Until Mar. 31

Had Balked at Limits

Up to yesterday the Senate had balked at any terminal limits on the DP talk. Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) had blocked a series of Lucas requests for a limitation. Earlier yesterday, Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) stopped another Lucas try for a talk limit starting next week.

Both Langer and Donnell contend no vote should be taken until the Judiciary Committee's voluminous hearings, still under way, were reduced to print for Senators to read. Lucas replied that transcripts of the hearings were available to any Sentaor who wanted to read them.

Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) whose committee bill retains some of the provisions President Truman in 1948 charged were discriminatory, has a primary campaign coming up and planned to leave today for Nevada for three weeks.

He told the Senate he wanted a vote on the bill by last night. Failing that, he proposed a vote be delayed until April 4. Lucas declined to accept that proposal, saying it would have a bad psychological effect on the bill and would endanger the June 1 deadline for visas under the present law. Lucas angrily accused McCarran of "never wanting any kind of a DP bill."

In midafternoon, when the DP outlook appeared dimmest, Lucas started circulating the cloture petition but told newsmen he did not know whether he would put it before the Senate.

Under the so-called "Wherry Cloture Rule" adopted last session, the votes of 64 Senators are necessary to shut off debate.

Administration leaders have charged repeatedly that the Wherry rule was unworkable. They had promised to "test" it in the coming FEPC filibuster.

Yesterday's cloture move would have moved up the "test," but it never came off. Hardly had word spread that the petition was signed up before the Senate fell in line with the March 31 debate limitation.

"It was the petition that turned the trick," said one leadership spokesman.

Judges Chosen For Fairfax Annexation Case

Two judges were named yesterday to sit in Fairfax County with Judge Paul E. Brown of the sixteenth Circuit and hear an annexation case involving Falls Church against the county.

They are Judge J. R. H. Alexander of the Twenty-sixth Circuit and Judge Burnett Miller, jr. of the Ninth Circuit. The hearing is scheduled to begin March 31 or on another date set by the court.

The designations were made by Chief Justice Edward W. Hudgins of the Virginia Supreme Court in Richmond.

Boone Was Removed As 'Uncooperative'

Rear Admiral Joel T. Boone agreed yesterday with his superiors in the Defense Department that he was fired from his job as senior defense medical officer because he was "uncooperative."

Boone, who was personal physician to three Presidents, told a House Armed Services subcommittee he was informed of the department's estimate of his attitude February 28. He went at once to Navy Secretary Matthews, he related, and Matthews was "very disturbed."

While Boone was testifying the Defense Department issued a statement saying he was removed and ordered to the Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery for reassignment because he was "not in sympathy with the economy program of the medical services." Boone objected to a recent order of Defense Secretary Johnson closing a number of service hospitals.

Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House committee asked Johnson to hold up his hospital economy program until the committee could investigate. Johnson replied that he would halt the move until April 1, but declined to rescind his order.

In an added development, Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of medical services of the Defense Department, issued a statement denying that Boone had been fired because of his testimony before any congressional committee. Boone, said Meiling, was "not in sympathy with the economy program of the medical services of the armed forces" and his replacement in the high defense post had been requested last Novmber.

He has, added Meiling, "every right to make any statement he desires before committees of Congress or elsewhere."

Boone, who is 60, entered the Navy in 1914 and won the Medal of Honor while serving with a Marine regiment in World War I. He is the second admiral to be fired from a high post, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld having been removed as Chief of Naval Operations last fall.

Meiling told a press conference that Maj. Gen. R. W. Bliss and Rear Admiral C. A. Swanson, surgeons general of the Army and Navy, opposed the reduction in hospitals but "could live with it." Maj. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, Air Force surgeon general, said the Air Force "and I personally have gone along 100 percent with the whole program."

A court hearing for Eugene L. Runyon, McLean, Va., farmer charged with drunk driving in a truck-school bus collision last Friday which injured five children, was continued indefinitely yesterday.

The hearing was continued in Fairfax County Trial Justice Court pending recovery of two of the five children, who were admitted to Arlington Hospital March 2 after the accident. They were treated for head injuries and released Tuesday. The collision took place about 4:30 p. m. March 2, 4 miles north of Herndon near Route 7.

Gallinger Plans Experiment With New Blood Test for TB

Gallinger Hospital will begin a six-month intensive control study of a new, cheap blood test for presence of tuberculosis, which may revolutionize present testing methods.

Dr. Sol Katz, chief of pulmonary diseases at Gallinger, described the new method as similar to a Wasserman test and said results would be available within 24 hours. Present checks sometimes takes weeks and even months.

On Tuesday, a New York hospital chief reported the test had proven 92 percent accurate on 1200 persons and enabled doctors to tell whether tuberculosis germs were active in the body and how serious the tuberculosis was.

Dr. Katz said he had been interested in the test since it was announced by its developers a year ago. They are Dr. Rene Dubos, and his associate, Dr. Carl Middlebrook, both of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research in New York City.

The report by Dr. Sidney Rothbard of New York's Montefiore Hospital on his findings Tuesday spurred Dr. Katz to launch a similar study here. Patients will be tested by the usual methods and the new one.

Dr. Monroe J. Romansky, associate professor of medicine at George Washington University Medical School, will collaborate in the Gallinger study.

2000 Employes Here To Get Free X-Rays

About 2000 employes of local business firms will receive free chest X-rays in the next 10 days from the District Tuberculosis Association.

The first will be the Hamilton National Bank workers, who will be checked today. Others are Thompson's Dairy, 2012 11th st. nw., Friday and Saturday; Kiplinger's Washington Agency and magazine, "Changing Times," Tuesday at 1907 K st. nw., and Arcade Sunshine Laundry, 735 Lamont st. nw., next Wednesday.

More than 21,000 local workers have been checked by the association's portable X-ray machines in the past 12 months.

Late Marriage Held Harmful pelvic cavity causes strong chemical actions and formation of cysts ranging from pea-size to the size of oranges.

Two theories account for the condition. The first is that live membraneous tissue is sloughed off in menstruation and regurgitates up the Fallopian tubes to grow about the ovaries and in the pelvic cavity. The second holds that the misplaced tissues form through delayed embryonic processes.

In either case, Dr. Daniel stated, the condition arises in inverse proportion to the number of menstrual periods in women.

"Pregnancy and lactation are nature's method of treating endometrosis," Dr. Daniel declared.

Urges Conservative Surgery

Dr. Daniel was joined by Dr. H. Hudnall Ware jr., also of Richmond, in advocating conservative surgery for the condition, particularly during the patient's reproductive years.

In one series of cases cited by Dr. Ware, statistics showed that of 14 patients who underwent conservative surgery for endometriosis, 17 pregnancies followed. Two of the patients, Dr. Ware said, were already past 35 years of age, but conceived and delivered children normally after their operations.

Yesterday's scientific session preceded convocation services last night at which ten District surgeons were received into the Congress as Senior Fellows; four others became Junior Felows; three were named Honorary Fellows, and five became Associate Fellows.

Speaker for the convocation services was Dr. George F. Lull of Chicago, secretary and general manager of the American Medical Association. He spoke on "The Doctor's Responsibilities in View of the Changing Times."

Local doctors received last night into the Congress, an affiliation of surgeons from 12 Southeastern States and the District of Columbia, were: Senior Fellows, Drs. William Wiley Chase, Robert J. Coffey, John H. Lyons, William Ross Morris, George K. Nutting, Wendell A. Parker, Paul Stirling Putzki, H. H. Schoenfeld, J. Ross Veal, and John Ogle Warfield, jr.

Junior Fellows, Drs. Carlos A. Dominguez, William H. Ferguson, C. S. White, jr., and Edward C. Wilson.

Honorary Fellows, Drs. Maj. Gen. H. G. Armstrong, Maj. Gen. M. C. Grow, and James F. Mitchell.

50 Navy Planes Loaded on French Carrier

Norfolk, Va., March 8 (U.P.)—Fifty United States Navy fighters and bombers were loaded aboard the French aircraft carrier Dixmude today as the first shipment of a one-billion-dollar program to re-arm western Europe under the Atlantic Pact.

Jean Daridan, charge d'affaires and minister counsellor of the French Embassy, accepted the planes in ceremonies aboard the Dixmude and pledged that they would be used for peace.

Daridan said the ceremonies today would lose meaning "unless one thinks of it in connection with the Pacific organization of democratic nations which forms its framework."

The United States was represented by John H. Oley, deputy director of the European arms program.

Also present were Representatives Thomas (D., Ill.) and John Vorys (R., Ohio), from the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representatives F. E. Hebert (D., La.) and Leroy Johnson (R., Calif.) of the House Armed Services Committee.

The ceremonies were recorded for rebroadcasts to Europe by the Voice of America.

Officials said the American-built 14,500 ton escort carrier would remain here several days while French pilots become familiar with handling the Helldiver bombers and Corsair fighters.

The Dixmude is expected to sail about March 15, its destination a secret. Reports from Europe indicated a Communist-inspired move to arouse dockworkers in Europe to refuse to unload American military aid.

Probe Sought In Hiring of Alien Seamen

Baltimore, March 8 (AP).—Four hundred aroused union seamen are seeking a congressional investigation of the transfer of American ships to foreign registries.

The National Maritime Union sailors met yesterday to protest the manning of a new supertanker by 39 German seamen flown here from Germany.

The stormy two-hour session heard proposals from the floor that:

(1) They beat up the German seamen; (2) The ship be picketed and an attempt made to "take it over"; (3) the offices of the National Maritime Commission be picketed.

But after vigorous word battles, an element lead by John J. Smith, local agent for the NMU, won with the resolution asking for the investigation.

The tanker, the 28,000-ton Olympic Flame, is being built by Bethlehem Steel's shipyards here for the Olympic Oil Lines. The company operates several vessels under foreign flags.

Ship owners have claimed at recent congressional hearings on maritime affairs that they can operate much cheaper under foreign registry because they are not required to pay the high wages prevailing on American ships.

"If you beat up those German seamen," Smith told the meeting, "it won't get you one damn thing but it would be a bonanza to the papers in eastern Germany and the satellite countries who would say that American seamen had terrorized a crew from western Germany."

He said the German seamen were hired in their own union halls. They "were trying to make a living like everyone else," Smith added, and charged they were "hooked into it by the people in the steamship company."

62 Are Hurt In Portrex 'Chute Jumps

Vieques Island, P. R., March 8. (U.P.)—Sixty-two paratroopers out of 1000 jumping in a relistic airborne-amphibous training exercise suffered bone fractures and sprains today.

The precentage of injuries, about 6 percent, was much higher than usual in training jumps. Spokesmen said none of the injured was in serious condition, although eight were evacuated by plane. The remainder were treated in field hospitals.

The terrain into which the paratroopers jumped was fairly level, but rough, and included some uprooted palm tree stumps.

Paratroopers from the famed 82d Airborne Division, now stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., jumped behind the beachheads an hour before 15,000 seaborne troops of the reinforced Third Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Ga., began landing on red and blue beaches.

The airborne-amphibian assault climaxed Portrex, the largest peacetime maneuvers ever held jointly by the Army, Navy and Air Force. It involved 80,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen, 160 ships, and more than 500 Air Force and Navy planes.

The attack on this small tropical island was used to try out for the first time new amphibious warfare tactics designed to lessen atomic bomb casualties and damage.

The tactics stressed dispersal of both large ships and landing craft and as fast movement of men and equipment as possible. Military leaders, without evaluating the anti-atomic-bomb tactics, said they were "very satisfied" with the training exercise. They cited it as proof of combat unification of the Armed Services.

Citizens' Federation

For 40 years the aims and programs of the District citizens' associations have been brought into central focus by the Federation of Citizens Associations. It has been a constructive influence in the support of schools, civil service legislation, public improvements, and the general welfare of the community. Since 1916 it has been a leading influence in the fight for local suffrage. In celebrating its fortieth anniversary Tuesday night with a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, the federation could point with pride to many achievements.

No doubt the federation will be first to acknowledge, however, that what it has done in the past is dwarfed by the civic tasks yet to be accomplished. The home-rule bill is not yet law. Herculean efforts in this field are needed in the next few weeks, and if the bill is enacted the community will undergo something akin to a civic revolution. It will need strong, well-balanced and progressive citizens to set up the new government and knit the community together in its new endeavor. Out of its century and a half of history Washington has had a unified government partly chosen by its own people for only three years. In the many years of its disfranchisement municipal needs have accumulated, civic tensions have multiplied, the problem of law enforcement has become acute, and the task of integrating municipal services in the District and its satellite communities is assuming ever larger proportions.

It is a time to look forward rather than backward even on anniversaries. Every citizen will hope that the federation will be as alert to the challenge before it as to the tradition behind it.

Mr. Lie's Device

Secretary General Trygve Lie has made a gallant effort to lift world diplomacy out of the status of a mere chess game. He has suggested a way out of the impasse in the United Nations consequent upon the divided diplomatic policy of the constituent members toward China. He wants "representation" policy to be divorced from diplomatic policy. Under this formula a legal majority vote in the Security Council would be enough both to unseat the Chinese Nationalist representative and to seat the Chinese Communist representative.

However, the United States already is bound under the Little Assembly's interpretation of the veto rule to accept Communist China in the event of a majority vote by the Security Council. The legal majority is 7 out of 11 members. By the same token it would have to accept the unseating of the Nationalist representative, though as Secretary Acheson said yesterday, it would continue to cast its vote against any such proposal. The trouble is that in spite of the fact that Communist China has presented its credentials for China's place, no discussion has yet been taken on the application. The Soviet Union saw to that. The Security Council, by legal majority vote, refused to unseat the Nationalists before credentials had been presented by Communist China, and then the Soviet took a walk, and hasn't returned. Here is the deadlock that Mr. Lie is trying to break.

One reason for the checking tactics on Moscow's part was to earn kudos with the Chinese Communists during the Mao-Stalin negotiations in Moscow. But another motive is now clear. Moscow wants to discourage any move on the part of the Western powers to recognize Communist China. It didn't prevent British recognition, but it effectively restrained the French by recognizing Ho Chih-minh's rebel regime in Indo-China as the Viet Nam government. This slap in the face for France has cooled off any French tendency there may have been to recognize Mao Tze-tung.

So the key to acceptance of the Lie plan is not in the United States but in the Soviet Union. And there is no indication that Moscow will take any notice of it. Doubtless the impasse in the Security Council is still necessary to Soviet calculations. The Muscovites have got their agreement out of Mao Tze-tung, but they are still some distance from making the Chinese Communists the tools of their Asiatic purposes, and it is our guess they will never succeeed. However, they are still hard at work at the attempt. Russian advisers are crowding Peking, all of them what the Chinese call "two suitcase" men, picking up in one bag purchases of Peking's wares and paying for them with the paper money kept in the other bag. It is all a kind of loot, for the Russians are enabled to buy cheap with their purely arbitrary and artificial revaluation of the ruble. While the getting is good, the Muscovites are going to get, in the meantime keeping China more or less insulated.

McCarthy's Arrow

Senator Tydings' way of conducting the hearing into Senator McCarthy's charges that the State Department is riddled with communism is a pledge that those charges will be thoroughly sifted as the hearing proceeds. His searching interrogations recall the great days of the wartime Truman Committee. Since then the standards of investigation have become debased, with damaging effects upon the prestige of Congress, as well as the standing and security of the United States. Senator Tydings appears determined to reclaim traditional canons of fair practice. When Senator McCarthy opened his testimony yesterday, he was asked to spell out his charges, and was given no chance to leave incomplete and tendentious statements suspended in midair until such time as the completed story could be obtained. In consequence, the headlines of this hearing will look somewhat different from those that Senator McCarthy may have anticipated.

Take, for instance, Case No. 1. This concerned Miss Dorothy Kenyon, who did work at the U. N. for the State Department. Apparently Miss Kenyon has a congenital habit of "joining," a habit which de Tocqueville tells us is an American characteristic. She is or was a member of a number of groups that are on the Attorney General's list. Senator McCarthy bracketed her name with those of fellow members who have since been proved to be Communists. Does that in itself make Miss Kenyon a Communist? Only if this country has become wedded to that guilt by association which is the mark of a police system and anathema to individualist America. The committee refused to let this juicy item stand without clarification. The question was asked whether Miss Kenyon's membership antedated or postdated the announcement of the Attorney General's list—a list, charitably interpreted, intended to warn the unwary that these groups were Communist infiltrated. Senator McCarthy didn't know. What, however, was brought out was that Miss Kenyon (and the few Communists) had been joined in these associations by scores of well-known Americans, addicted, as she was, to "joining," and in some cases afflicted with that harmless peccadillo of liking to see their names on letterheads.

With Senator Tydings acting as a sort of department of amplification, some degree of fairness will be imparted into the present hearing. He was ably seconded in this endeavor by his Democratic colleagues, Senators McMahon and Green. It is a pity that Senators Lodge and Hickenlooper, watchdogs of the Republican Party, were not equally jealous of maintaining upright procedure. Their interventions reflected the fear that Senator Tydings was using his chairmanship to heckle and not to delve. Clearly the hearing will be shot through with partisanship, but the watchfulness of the Democrats is justified by the political motivations of the McCarthy charges.

In this connection the history of these charges is worth repetition. Instead of bringing them privately to the Secretary of State or to the President, Senator McCarthy cast them to the four winds, not in Washington but in the course of a political tour. He charged that there were 205 subversives in the State Department. Then, in the presence of the waiting newspapermen, he scratched out the figure with a pencil, and substituted 81. Yet this utterly irresponsible method of playing with the Nation's security was taken up by his Republican colleagues in the hope that the smearing of the State Department and any revelations that might emerge would be useful ammunition for the next election. They may get some ammunition. As to that, we haven't the foggiest idea. However, we do know that the kind of thing that Senator McCarthy indulged in is more productive of national divisiveness than of party advantage, and that Senator Tydings is offsetting the one as much as the other in keeping the hearing on an American plane.

Relief For Strikers

John L. Lewis' offer to lend the United Automobile Workers a million dollars to carry on their strike against the Chrysler Corp. raises some interesting questions. The offer which has been declined by the UAW is startling chiefly because it comes just after the prolonged coal strike in which the miners are said to have suffered many hardships. The man in the street naturally asks: If the United Mine Workers have a million dollars to lend, why did they not use it to aid their own strikers instead of getting them on public relief? Reports from Pennsylvania during the strike were to the effect that the miners were getting about $100 a month in relief from the State.

Of course, the UMW could not pay strike benefits after Judge Keech issued his injunction against continuation of the strike. To have done so would have been an obvious violation of the court's order. Did the States continue their aid to the strikers when they were in open defiance of the Federal law? Certainly this is a question that ought to be explored. If the States were doing so, they would be in the position of aiding and abetting the miners in the prolongation of a national emergency and in setting a pattern of lawlessness.

The whole policy of giving public aid to men on strike is a highly questionable one. Apparently some of the States act on the laudable theory that human suffering ought to be relieved regardless of what may be the cause. Even so, the operation of that theory ought to have some relation to realities. The UMW is reported to have 18 million dollars in its treasury in addition to large sums in the treasuries of its locals. If it was wealthy enough to give the steelworkers' union half a million dollars and now to offer a million-dollar loan to the UAW, certainly it should have been able to keep some of its own members off the relief rolls during its own strike. The known facts strongly suggest that Mr. Lewis makes a policy of forcing miners on strike to seek charity while he hoards an enormous kitty to enhance his power and strengthen his hand in creating worse emergencies in the future.

It is time for serious thought to be given to this aspect of the problem. There is no sense in paying public benefits to strikers who could be supported by their union, simply because the union leaders would prefer to keep their funds for other purposes.

Bradley's Reassurance

No one is better qualified to resolve the perplexities about the actual status of America's defense than the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Bradley. He has now done just that in a speech which is a model of clear thinking in these confused times. His answer to the question whether defense is adequate is simply this: If war is expected tomorrow, No; but over the long run, in company with long-range policies to promote international peace and international collective security, Yes. Such a long-range program is obviously a calculated risk based upon, and conditioned by, intelligence estimates as to the probability of Russian aggression.

General Bradley quickly disposes of the idea that we must match plane for plane and tank for tank. "It would be economically foolhardy and politically inconsistent," he says, "for us to maintain forces in being sufficient to win a major war." American defense consists of two fundamental elements: enough forces in being to forestall a crippling blow to this country and to slow down the aggressor through retaliation; and the ability to mobilize rapidly in personnel, supply and industrial support. (What, incidentally, could be more important in this respect than the appointment of a chairman for the National Security Resources Board, which is charged with mobilization planning? The job has been vacant since December, 1948!)

With respect to forces in being, General Bradley emphasizes the importance of enough strength to hold the bases we would need in case of war. The most serious threat to this aim is the submarine. General Bradley stresses the necessity for the antisubmarine program to progress "as fast as our research and development facilities will permit." He does not place exaggerated faith in the atomic bomb. While citing its retaliatory power, he recognizes that this is inconclusive and calls for development of other weapons.

One of the most significant portions of General Bradley's review is his observation of the effect of economies on the mobilization base. With a proper appreciation of the need for saving and the gains made so far in shearing off "fat," he warns against further cuts which may do harm in the future. In effect he says: "So far and no further." His is a timely caution against the kind of false economy that would not be so readily apparent as a reduction in planes or divisions but would be just as damaging in the long run.

This is a calm and earnest, if sometimes unspecific, statement of facts by the Nation's most respected active military leader. It contains no boasting, no soft soap. Perhaps the most encouraging thing about it is Bradley's recognition that the defense of the United States is bound up with that of the rest of the free world and that it depends on more than arms alone. To yield to the cries of the hysterics and retreat to a sort of bristling isolationism would be to discourage every friend we have abroad and to increase our own hazards and difficulties.

Separating Subsidies

Pressure has been mounting for the separation of airline subsidies from payments for carrying the mail. Such pressure is altogether to the good. It reflects a healthy movement, not to end subsidies to airlines when they are warranted, but to bring them out in the open where they can stand on their own merits. The separation was urged by the Hoover Commission, it received strong indorsement from the President in his budget message, and now it has support on Capitol Hill in the form of the bill introduced by Representative John Kennedy. The desirability of this change is emphasized by the fact that payments to airlines aggregate some 125 million dollars a year and add materially to the Postoffice deficit, yet no one can say precisely how much of this is earned payment and how much is subsidy.

It is by no means depreciating the aim, however, to say that the separation is not so simple as mere passage of a law might indicate. The Civil Aeronautics Board has a good point, we think, in stating that it must have money, staff and time to prepare itself for determining just what constitutes fair mail payment. For example, it is highly relevant just how airline overhead costs are to be allocated between mail, passengers and freight; freight now is carried at a much lower rate as an inducement to traffic, and low freight charges can be justified only if overhead is absorbed elsewhere.

To say that preparation is essential is not to condone indefinite delay. What is necessary is a precise timetable that will permit the CAB to develop the criteria which the Kennedy bill specifies only in broad form. Improvement, not chaos, is the goal; the important thing is to enable the CAB to embark on the investigation. A not incidental benefit of such a study should be to highlight inefficient practices among the airlines and place the carriers, large and small, more on their mettle.

FTC Investigation

On page 1-B of your issue of March 1, there appeared a story headed "Report Clears Trade Schools for Veterans." The second paragraph of that story reads as follows: "It also was learned that a Federal Trade Commission investigation of the schools' advertising methods had turned up only one instance of irregularity."

As a matter of fact, the commission has made no such finding, its investigation having been closed when it was determined that it lacked jurisdiction in the matter.

It is true that a preliminary investigation was made of some 30 trade schools in the District of Columbia. From the facts developed in this preliminary investigation it appeared that, with one exception, each of the schools is a "resident school" and therefore not engaged "in commerce" within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The commission's jurisdiction under the Federal Trade Commission Act (Section 5) is limited to "unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce." In general, "resident schools" not engaged in the sale of any commodity (as distinguished from "correspondence schools") are not considered to be "in commerce," as that term is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. The commission, therefore, has no jurisdiction to make any ruling with respect to any alleged "irregularity" on the part of such schools.

Thus, contrary to the plain implication contained in the paragraph quoted from your story, it is clear that the commission has made no determination as to either the propriety or impropriety of the practices of resident trade schools in the District of Columbia. It has determined only that, on the basis of the facts developed, it has no jurisdiction over the practices of these schools.

Dixiecrat Support

Much is heard today about the "Dixiecrats." This term is a misnomer. "Dixie" is a very dear word to the South, but in the interest of accuracy, the correct name of this political party is The States' Rights Democratic Party." The term "Dixiecrat" limits this party to the South whereas actually there are many supporters outside of the South.

Brannan Plan

By all means let us have the Brannan Plan. It would have the great virtue of establishing clearly the full cost of the farm support program, part of which is now hidden in artificially high prices to consumers. Furthermore, it would show other producers how they too could ignore the law of supply and demand with the help of the United States Treasury and the taxpayers. And there should be no need for restrictions on output since the more money is distributed the greater the purchasing power.

If it works, the millennium will be here. ECONOMIST.

Coal Ills

The article in your March 5 issue, "Coal Crisis Hits the Mining Communities First," by Leo and Betty G. Fishman, was the first report I have seen as to the effect of the strike on the miners.

Much has been written during the past weeks about individual hardships and the repercussions on our economy, caused by the strike; this article, however, highlights the suffering incurred by the strikers and their families. From other sources I understand that it will take the miners six years to make up for the equivalent of 114 earning days they have lost being idle.

Naturally, all of us are happy and relieved that an agreement finally has been reached. But this is not the time to sit back. With the memory of loss and suffering still fresh in everybody's mind, let's work for sound legislative measures to cure the ills of the coal industry permanently. H. H.

Real Estate Boards And Rent Control

As a steady reader of The Washington Post who has a high regard for the usual clarity and balance of your editorials, I find it difficult to understand your present editorial stand to end rent control.

In your editorial of March 2, you reaffirm your opposition to "legislation by appropriation" and then, in the next breath, say that the Senate Appropriations Committee, by voting to liquidate rent control before the expiration of the present act, is saving the Senate "time-wasting debates on this controversial issue," since rent control won't be extended anyhow. Surely, the same plea could be made for nearly every piece of "legislation by appropriation"—it's the easy way to do it. It saves a lot of time and trouble not to have a public hearing and not to face the facts and issues. We could save lots of trouble if we would just abandon democratic processes altogether. But I cannot believe that that is what you are advocating.

It may interest your readers, if not your editorial writer, to know that the action of the Senate Appropriations Committee is exactly in line with the tactics advocated by the real estate interests who have consistently opposed rent control, year after year. At the National Association of Real Estate Boards Convention last November, Kendall Cady, past president of the Institute of Real Estate Management, told the realtors how to get rid of rent control. "I think I have a gimmick to fight this battle," he said. His "gimmick" was to win the fight before the Appropriations Committee so that the Housing Expediter would be told that he had no more money. "That's where we can get him," not in June when Congressmen "will be thinking of November and not of ending rent control." Clearly, this spokesman for the real estate interests recognized that if Congressmen voted on rent control with their minds on the interests and views of their constituents, they might well extend the authority to protect renters in the many places where critical housing shortages still exist.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards is not nearly as sure as your editorial writer is that the end of rent control on July 1 is a foregone conclusion. In the February 27 issue of the real estate newsletter, Headlines, NAREB's president called on local real estate boards to work fast for local decontrol in their own communities as the only way to get rid of Federal control. "If we get Federal decontrol on next June 30, he wrote, "it will be because rent decontrol actions are rolling up so fast that Congress will be persuaded to let the Federal law die. If, at the end of a year of local option, only one fifth of the total number of rental units has been decontrolled, then Congress will say, 'Okay Mr. President, we'll grant your request for another year of Federal control. Communities representing four fifths of the rental units have not asked for local decontrol. That includes the big cities where we all want the tenants' votes next fall'. The danger is great and immediate."

If the legal requirement of a public hearing is observed and city councils give due weight to actual facts, rent decontrol actions may not "roll up" as fast as NAREB's president hopes, not only in the big cities, but in some of the smaller communities as well. Six months ago, the Housing Expediter announced that he would decontrol all places under 25,000 unless one or more of six conditions likely to produce a critical situation existed in the community. Rent advisory boards or city councils in more than half of the places affected informed him that these conditions did exist and advised against decontrol.

Most of these local recommendations against decontrol were made before studies of the actual results of decontrol were available. Now, the Bureau of Labor Statistics has studied seven of the larger decontrolled cities and has found a consistent pattern. Not only have rents jumped sharply in the great majority of all dwellings taken out from under control, but they have risen two and three times as much for people living in lowest rent dwellings, least able to bear an additional burden. In Dallas, for example, rents under $30 jumped an average of 56 percent while those over $50 jumped 26 percent. In Knoxville, the corresponding figures were 36 percent and 11 percent.

The action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in cutting off rent control operating funds is reported to have been taken in response to an appeal from Senator Harry P. Cain. Senator Cain, a frank spokesman for real estate interests, assured Governor Dewey last January that rent control would not be extended, for "those for whom I speak will use every conceivable legitimate means, including whatever time is required, to prevent the Federal Government from any longer mismanaging and interfering with the property rights of American citizens throughout the Nation."

Child Pawns Of Legalism

By Malvina Lindsay

Human Needs Neglect

THE WAY in which letter-of-the-law practices handicap this country's increasing number of children without homes or in divided homes is concerning legal and child welfare authorities.

If little Johnny is a pawn in an uncontested case of divorce or annulment, he usually goes automatically to the parent who is plaintiff, without social investigation of what kind of home is offered or of the parent's character and responsibility.

If he is homeless—possibly one of the 100,000 or more illegitimate children born each year—he may be denied a good home because of the rigid rules of authorized private and public adoption agencies.

Recently Justine Wise Polier of the Domestic Relations Court of New York, called legal machinery for caring for children "an interesting museum piece for antiquarians" and an "architectural monstrosity." She especially decried the way children's "lives and welfare" were so frequently determined in divorce cases, either in courts having no machinery to investigate the parent's or other guardian's fitness, or in lawyers' offices by haggling and trading.

YET ON the other hand too much letter-of-the-law investigation of couples wanting to adopt children is boosting the black market in babies, Albert Q. Maisel charges in an article in the current Woman's Home Companion. What is more, says Mr. Maisel, this practice is cheating thousands of children out of good homes and parental love.

Many adoption agencies in their zeal to have everything "just right" have set up so many rules for applicants concerning age, background, ancestry and even color of hair, that two out of three would-be parents turn to unauthorized agencies, says Mr. Maisel.

Many children languish in institutions or go from one boarding home or parking place to another while the demand for adopted children falls far short of being met. With about 1 out of 10 married couples being childless (in Washington the illegitimacy rate is nearly 10 percent of all live births), and with the number of homeless children increasing through family breakups, greater efforts are needed to bridge the gulf between couples who want children and children who need parents.

Both of these predicaments show the need for more special courts to deal with all phases of family relations, including divorce and child welfare. There is now a rising demand, even in legal circles, that divorce should no longer be a legal dog-and-cat fight—no matter how politely conducted. Today, with the punitive and conflict concept of divorce prevailing, the human aspects of child custody are often lost sight of.

MANY advocates of special family courts would have these deal with all divorces and annulments, all child-custody cases, care of delinquent and neglected children, paternity proceedings and perhaps adoptions. These courts would be equipped and staffed to work on the preventive rather than the punitive angle of divorce, and to carry on investigations of how children involved in family relations cases could be given the best opportunity for the future.

Putting adoption of children under jurisdiction of such courts might loosen up some of the red tape in which many adoption agencies are bound and also tighten up the haphazard practices by which unstable or divided families often dispose of children.

A special committee on divorce of the American Bar Association has proposed a wide extension of family courts now existing in about one third of the States. If more efforts could be made to get at the social facts behind family breakups rather than the legalistic ones, and the emphasis in courts be put on prevention rather than punishment, there might be far less homeless children to dispose of. Such an approach also would shift emphasis to the welfare of the child, emotional as well as physical, and give him more dignity and importance in society.

Phone Rate Increase

It is understood that the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia approved an increase of 9 percent in the rates of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Since, after investigation, consideration and public hearings, this was the commission's decision, a subscriber has no grounds for objecting. But the 9 percent increase should be levied equally on all subscribers and not permitted to rest most heavily on those who use the service least.

For example, I have a private line limited service for which I now pay $3.75 plus 56-cent tax, making a total of $4.31. A 50-cent additional charge will make an increase in my bill of 13.33 percent which, of course, is unfair. The same is true for party line, limited service and party line subscribers. On the other hand, those who have private lines with unlimited service and pay $4.75 a month will be charged a 10.07 percent increase. Business lines will be charged an even lower percentage. Yet, five or six people may be using the private line and the business phone may be used extensively day and night.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Electing A President

III

[This is the third and concluding article on the Lodge-Gossett Amendment to the Constitution (S. J. Res. 2) which passed the Senate on February 1, 1950, and is now before the House. If it is adopted by a two-thirds vote of the House, it must be ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States within seven years of the date when it is submitted to them by Congress.

[This series of articles has been written in consulation with and on the basis of a memorandum prepared for me by Mr. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., of Princeton, N. J.]

WE SHALL now discuss that part of the Lodge-Gossett Amendment which employs the principle of proportional representation showing why we believe that the district system, as intended by the framers of the Constitution, is preferable. We realize that not for many years has the district system been considered seriously in Congress. But the reason, we think, is that American reformers were so strongly influenced after the middle of the nineteenth century by John Stuart Mill's advocacy of proportional representation. The apparent fairness of the principle of proportional representation hid the grave dangers and defects of that principle. The Lodge-Gossett amendment is based on that principle.

Lippmann

It does away with the State electoral colleges but it keeps the State electoral votes. These it distributes among the several candidates for President on the principle of proportion. Thus a candidate who receives 42.5 percent of the popular vote of a State would earn 42.5 percent of its electoral vote, etc., etc. The calculations in the Lodge-Gossett amendment are to be carried to three decimal places in an attempt to achieve mathematical accuracy.

THE MERITS of this system are very easy to see. It gives to every political grouping of voters in the national election a weight as nearly proportional to its mass as the present unequal electoral weighting of the States permits. It avoids the seizure of minority votes by majorities. That is to say the arrangement, for example, by which in 1948 the 2,780,000 votes cast for Truman in New York were counted in the electoral college for Dewey, and the 1,960,000 votes cast for Dewey in Illinois were counted for Truman in the electoral college.

Moreover, the proposed method reduces the size of the electoral swings which may be caused by accident, fraud, or the power of minor parties. In large measure it destroys the political advantages of the large doubtful States. It would revive political activity in the sure States.

Its demerits are not so obvious. And yet we think they exist. They can best be brought out by comparing the Lodge-Gossett Amendment with its alternative—the district system.

LET US consider how the two systems would probably work in practice. Under the district system accidents will generally have no effect upon the result of a national election. Bad weather keeps voters home in one district; local issues bring them out in another. But Democrats and Republicans are equally affected by the accidents; district results as a whole are not substantially changed. Each district casts its single vote just as it would have cast it had the weather been clear and the issues normal. Under the proportional system the accident is reflected in the distribution of the State's electoral vote and eventually in the Nation-wide electoral vote. So with fraud. Under the district system a manufactured vote can affect only the district in which it is cast. If the candidate on whose behalf it was manufactured carries the district without its help or if he fails to carry the district, the effect is nil; in other cases, the fraud will swing one electoral vote. But under the proportional system, a manufactured vote is always reflected in the distribution of the electoral vote and its effect is limited only by the size of the fraud.

THIS BRINGS us to our main objection to the Lodge-Gossett Amendment, to our main reason for preferring the district system amendment. We believe that if the system of proportional representation is applied to the presidential electors or, what comes to the same thing to the presidential electoral vote, that it will eventually be applied to the Representatives in Congress. And such a result is, we think, to be avoided at all costs—even at that of retaining the obnoxious general ticket system which we now have.

For by applying the principle of proportional representation to electoral votes the Lodge-Gossett Amendment would provide a precedent, and, as Senator Ferguson has remarked, no one needs to be told the importance of precedent in democratic government. It will be difficult to explain to a vigorous minority why it is entitled to a third, let us say, of a State's electoral votes and yet is not entitled to a third of its votes in the House of Representatives. In the 1948 election, for example, Wallace got 2.4 per cent of the popular vote. Under the Lodge-Gossett Amendment he would have been credited with 1.9 per cent of the electoral vote. If such a system were in effect, it would be very difficult to explain to the followers of a Wallace that their votes were entitled to proportional representation in the electoral vote but that they were not entitled to proportional representation in the House.

THIS IS more than a theoretical danger. The establishment of proportional representation in the congressional delegations might come about in one of two ways. It could be introduced piecemeal by the Legislatures of the several States. Section Three of the Apportionment Act of 1911, prescribing that Representatives in all States shall be elected on the single member district system, is no longer on the statute books. It was declared by the Supreme Court in 1932 to have expired by its own limitation with the apportionment to which it related. Congress has never reenacted the provision.

Proportional representation might also be introduced in the House of Representatives by Congress itself. Suppose that the general ticket system for Representatives should come to be established by the State Legislatures as the ordinary method of choosing Representatives—that is to say suppose Congressmen came to be elected at-large rather than by districts. The evils following on this change would soon give rise to a movement for reform. Congress would be called upon to exercise its original and concurrent power to make or alter the State regulations in regard to the manner of holding elections for Representatives. With the example of the Lodge-Gossett Amendment before it, it might plump for the system of proportional representation.

This contingency is not so remote as it might seem. Some States now use the general ticket system to choose Representatives and others have experimented with it from time to time.

THE EVILS of proportional representation are, one, that it destroys the two-party system and substitutes for it a many-party system. This has happened everywhere that the principle has been applied and is one of the chief causes of the instability of democratic government in countries like France.

The second evil is closely related to it. The effect of proportional representation is to fill the Legislature with men who are immoderate and uncompromising. For under proportional representation the constituents of a Representative are not the people living in a geographical area but an abstract group of voters who all think alike. A Representative does not have to consider those who may differ with him. He is merely the delegate of those who think alike. Therefore, he is not predisposed to moderate views and to compromises but to irreconcilability and extremism.

Moreover, under the proportional system the constituency of each Representative is mathematical rather than geographical, abstract rather than personal. The Representative does not know what actual persons he represents. Therefore his election is controlled by the party managers who really appoint him to represent the mathematical constituencies that the principle of proportional representation creates. And what the party managers will, therefore, look for in him is not thought but obedience. Anyone who has observed parliamentary government in a country where proportional representation exists will realize how in practice this works out.

WE REGARD these objections to the Lodge-Gossett Amendment as sufficient to justify its rejection. We believe that the district system, as contemplated in the Coudert substitute, is not open to these objections and that it will cure all the evils of the present system quite as well as the Lodge-Gossett Amendment.

Dayton Man Gets School Post Here

Dr. Richard R. Foster, Dayton, Ohio, public school research director, yesterday was appointed associate superintendent of District schools in charge of research.

The Board of Education unanimously approved the appointment of the Iowa-born educator to fill a vacancy that has existed in the white schools since the retirement of Miss Jessie LaSalle in December, 1948.

School board members also named Wilmer F. Bennett, mathematics and general science teacher at Langley Junior High School, to be assistant principal of the new Sousa Junior High School.

Dr. Foster, a graduate of the University of Iowa, with degrees of bachelor and master of arts and doctor of philosophy, began his career in education as a teaching superintnedent in 1923 in the schools of Hawkeye, Iowa.

He was a research director for the Ohio Education Association and for 15 years on the research staff of the National Education Association before appointment to his present post in Dayton. He will take over duties in Washington July 1.

Bennett, the new assistant principal of Sousa, is a 1937 graduate of Wilson Teachers College and received a master's degree in secondary school administration at Columbia University. During the war he served as a training officer and instructor with the Naval Air Force.

The board also approved the retirement of Mrs. Lydia W. Morris, 1901 15th st. nw., teacher at the Grimke School after 29 years of service.

School Appointment Revisions Ordered

The Board of Education yesterday escaped a possible legal tangle but ordered Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning to revise the system of appointment of school personnel to prevent future difficulties.

Board members voted to turn down the appeal of a Miner Teachers College professor who felt her qualifications had not been given sufficient consideration when the board appointed an instructor over her head to the post of chairman of the department of social studies at the college.

Board members ruled that Dr. Marguerite Williams had been given fair treatment. They admitted, though, that they would have been in an "impossible situation" if they had found otherwise. Their appointment of Dr. Bernard Nelson to the contested job was binding, they said.

Dr. Corning agreed to set up a system that would give a period of grace before appointments become final to give other candidates a chance to appeal.

Mrs. Velma G. Williams dissented from the view of other board members that Dr. Williams had been fairly treated when her qualifications were evaluated by school officers. She said that school officers had not answered to her satisfaction why some of Dr. Williams' credits had been ruled out.

Dispersion Ordered

The 525 junior high students and 784 senior high students enrolled at Central will be dispersed to other white schools. The large Central night school and recreational program also will be moved from Central building.

The board approved the transfer by a vote of 5 to 2, Voting for the transfer were three Negro board members, Mrs. Velma G. Williams, John Wilson and Dr. Phillip Johnson. They were joined by Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith and Dr. James A. Gannon.

Dissenting were Albert E. Steinem and Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger.

After the vote had been taken Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning told the crowd in the hearing room that "it is imperative that all of us in the schools and in the community forget differences that have arisen."

Organizations Present

In the room were representatives of both white and Negro civic, business and educational organizations that had been taken strong stands both pro and con on the Central transfer.

Dr. Corning said all should "unite in a common effort" to support the board's action "for the interest of the successful operation of the schools and effective service to the boys and girls."

He said the "greatest adjustment" will have to be made by Central students and alumni.

He promised them "every effort will be made to preserve so far as possible the name, tradition and the school itself as an entity."

No Plans for New School

Questioned after the meeting, the school head said he did not at present know how this could be done since the city has no immediate plans for a new white senior high school.

Dr. Corning said that in all his years as a school administrator he had never seen a board of education confronted with as difficult a problem as the Central transfer.

He said the board had been "eminently fair" and with "painstaking earnestness" had tried to arrive at a satisfactory solution knowing full well that no decision would be "fair to all."

The school superintendent told reporters after the meeting that he felt the transfer of Central to use by Negro students will have far reaching effect on the board's school construction program.

Seeks Replacement Funds

He referred them to a previous report which pointed out that if Central were transferred all Negro high school students would be accommodated without need for new buildings.

The school board currently is seeking funds for replacements for Cardozo and the Armstrong Technical High School.

School board members previously stated that if Central were transferred plans for a new Cardozo would be dropped.

Dr. Corning said he felt that yesterday's board action also placed the new Armstrong in a "skiddish" position although a new technical school is needed.

Central is bounded on the south by Florida ave., on the east by 11th st., on the west by 13th st., and on the north by Clifton st., nw.

He said he will bring a report to the board at its next meeting setting up details of the transfer. The report also will include an estimate of funds needed for refurbishing Central for its new occupants.

Central, a 34-year-old building, contains 64 classrooms and shops, a swimming pool, two gymnasiums, a conservatory, auditorium, library and the largest city owned stadium in the city.

The Cardozo building, 9th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., formerly was the old white Business High School. The Strayer Survey on District schools found the building inadequate and recommended it be abandoned.

The board voted for the Central transfer after receiving a recommendation from the buildings and grounds committee. Mrs. Magdeburger, who as a member of the committee previously supported the recommendation, withdrew her name from the report. She said that new facts on the possible use of the white Eliot Junior High School to relieve Cardozo caused her to change her mind. Steinem, who cast the other vote against the Central transfer, also favored consideration of Eliot.

House Members Tour Schools

Two House members yesterday toured Southeast Washington's postwar housing projects and visited two of the area's elementary schools.

The Congressmen, Representatives Foster Furcolo (D., Mass.) and Sidney Yates (D., Ill.), are members of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations and were asked by some Southeast parents to visit their "inadequate" school facilities.

Representatives of Southeast civic groups have been urging funds in the pending 1951 fiscal year budget for two more elementary schools for white children, and one junior high school for Negro students.

The Congressmen visited Congress Heights elementary school and Birney annex.

Officials of both schools told of vast overcrowding and inadequate equipment.

can't have Federal funds without Federal control. Children are the greatest collateral the United States has, and politics must be kept out of the school system if we are to preserve the future of this Republic. We are dealing here with human minds, not public roads. This is in many ways the most serious issue before the Congress, and once we take the step down the road to Federal control, we can never retreat."

The committee yesterday defeated in the first 21 to 3 vote a proposal by Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.) to limit Federal education aid to public schools.

Broader Limitation Facts

Then by the same vote, the committee refused to consider an even broader restriction by Representative Graham A. Barden (D., N. C.), who last Monday laid the blame for the defeat of proposals for Federal aid to education at the door of the Roman Catholic Church.

Barden's revival of the smouldering religious battle brought an answer yesterday from the Right Rev. John S. Middleton, New York Archdiocesan Secretary for Education.

The Monsignor spoke in the absence of Francis Cardinal Spellman, head of the Archdiocese, who is in Rome on a Holy Year pilgrimage.

Asserting the position of the Catholic had been misrepresented, Monsignor Middleton said the Roman Catholic Church does not seek public funds for general support of parochial schools. He said it wants no public money for teachers' pay, maintenance, building repair or construction.

For Auxiliary Services

Cardinal Spellman's contention was, the Monsignor said, that parochial schools—as much as public schools—are entitled to Government funds for support of such auxiliary services as bus transportation.

"The safety of millions of American children on highways leading to American schools, which they attend by natural and constitutional right is not a matter of special privilege.

"Surely, it has nothing to do with approval or disapproval of the religious belief and practices of those American children."

The committee is slated to act today on two other amendments, one by Representative Thomas H. Burke (D., O.), which would direct approximately 70 percent of the funds to teachers' salaries.

The other amendment is one by Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.), which would add an anti-segregation restriction on allocation of the money to insure minority and Negro pupils an equitable share of the funds.

tuous" in suggesting the coordinated drive appeal. He added, however, that he had noticed the "competition and resistance" to the Chest drive created by the multiplicity of appeals.

Secretary Tobin said the great number of drives has been discussed "at the Cabinet level." He added that if the National Capital could set the pattern for coordination, it would have an effect on other Community Chests throughout the country.

Luchs said that perhaps the Washington Board of Trade, or some similar group, might suggest the discussion meeting. In response to a question, he said that the consolidation proposal could include such national organizations as the American Red Cross, the Tuberculosis Association, etc.

He added, however, that this would be up to those organizations. (In Detroit, the Red Cross last year joined with the Community Chest on a one-appeal basis in the industrial plants there. It continued regular solicitation in other parts of the city.)

John A. Reilly, Chest treasurer and president of the Second National Bank, said he thought Luchs' proposal was "on the right track."

He said that Washington bankers for a number of years have had a policy of making only three charitable contributions. These were to the Community Chest, the American Red Cross, and the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The latter contribution, Reilly added, however, "is really in the form of a business investment, rather than a charity."

Luchs emphasized that the proposed discussion meeting must be "representative of the entire community, including Federal and District governments, business, labor, civic and trade associations, citizens groups and others in the District of Columbia, Alexandria and the four adjoining counties of Maryland and Virginia."

The Federation's action was spearheaded by a report from Federation President Chauncey G. Parker that a nearly "chaotic condition" exists because of the "multiplicity of independent, competing campaigns for funds."

He said collection expenses are so great that "considerable savings" would result if "more of the contributed dollars could be spent for services instead of for duplicating separate expense budgets."

Parker said he had been unofficially informed that "the Washington Board of Trade and the Junior Chamber of Commerce are both much interested in finding a solution to this problem."

Britain's Health Plan Costs $17.65 Per Person First Year

London, March 8 (NYHT).—In its first full year of operation Britain's National Health Service cost the British treasury about 6.3 pounds or $17.65 per person.

Publication by the Ministry of Health of a deficiency appropriation of 98,730,000 pounds for the year ending March 31 brings the total 1949-50 cost of the health scheme to 358,451,600 pounds.

Of this total, about 40 million pounds are derived from a payroll tax. This means the approximate cost of the scheme to the British Exchequer—which is met from taxes—is 318,457,000 pounds.

The weekly payroll contribution for a man is 8½ pence (about 10 cents) and for a woman 6½ pence (about 7½ cents). The employer's contribution in each case is 1½ pence (about 2 cents).

Other government departments published their deficiency appropriations for 1949-50 today and the over-all total, including the Ministry of Health figures, is 148,402,365 pounds.

The National Health Service got under way July 5, 1948, and soon nearly all of Britain's 50 million subjects joined up.

Brannan Plan May Be Tried If Price Support Mess Goes On

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

If present farm supports continue to get out of hand, as they have been doing in the case of potatoes, Congress may yet give the Brannan plan a try.

Last year it was opposed by every major farm organization except the National Farmers' Union, and Congress turned it down. Today farmers as well as Congressmen are beginning to wonder whether anything might not be better than the present mess.

Secretary Brannan's farm support program is aimed primarily at the perishables which account for 75 percent of farm income. These are commodities which will spoil in storage—things like milk, poultry, eggs, meat, fruits and vegetables.

Today we buy up nonperishable crops to keep prices at high support levels. But for perishables like potatoes the solution will not work.

Secretary Brannan would sell these products on the open market for whatever they would bring. If the market prices were below support levels, the Government would make up the difference in "production payments" to the farmer. The consumer would get the benefit of low food prices. the farmer of high incomes.

Would Maintain Buying Power

Support prices would be set to guarantee that a bushel of potatoes or a box of oranges would have the same purchasing power as in the base period, whatever happened to the price of the things the farmer must buy. The base would not be an obsolete period like 1910-14, but rather the first ten of the preceding twelve years. Each year the base would move forward.

The Brannan plan would put a brake on the farm prices during downswings. It would also prevent the violent year-to-year fluctuations which have characterized farm income in the past.

After all, the prices of things the farmer buys—cars, tractors, furniture—change very little from one year to another. But farm prices have risen and fallen with the sickening speed of a small boat in a heavy sea.

There is one other feature of the Brannan plan which should be mentioned. It would limit support payments to the maximum output of a family-size farm—at 1949 prices, about $25,000 worth of produce. Under present law, some farmers received hundreds of thousands of dollars in subsidy payments and at least one farmer received several millions.

Other Points of Difference

There are other points in which this program differs from the present Agricultural Act.

For one thing, the Government would not, on most foods, buy commodities to keep their prices up. Not only would food prices drop to free market levels, they might actually drop below them. This is because high support prices encourage larger output, and the greater the production, the lower the market price.

To prevent a glut of food and a collapse in market prices, the Brannan plan would have to rely on direct controls like marketing quotas and acreage allotments. This is a feature farmers do not like.

If every wheat farmers were ordered to cut acreage by 20 percent, farmers with high-yield land would be forced to take much of it out of production. At the same time, the marginal farmer would be encouraged to sow on poor land. This is no way to raise farm productivity. It has quite the opposite effect.

Limiting benefits to the average output of large family farms would have the same result. Family farms are not as efficient as the larger industrialized ones.

By penalizing efficiency, we are confusing social and economic objectives. It may be socially desirable to keep the small family farm as a way of life, but we should understand that the policy has its economic costs.

Farm Subsidy Costs Hidden

Would the Brannan plan cost more than our price support program? This is the question that bothers Congress. At present the cost of farm subsidies is pretty well hidden. Much of it is paid by the consumer at the grocery store. Only the minor portion shows up on his tax bill.

Under the Brannan plan, almost the whole bill would be paid by congressional appropriation. The amount probably would be higher than the present cost, in taxes and food prices, of the farm program. There are two reasons for this: the support level would be higher, and it would cover many products which are not now supported.

On the other hand, the average family would eat better because food prices would be much lower. For the same reason our agricultural exports would once more become competitive in the world market.

Secretary Brannan calls his plan an "income support" program. It is, of course, nothing of the kind. No price subsidies can raise farm income where it is lowest, on the small family farms which raise little more than what they consume.

Out of the 1,589,706 farms harvesting cotton in 1939, almost 80 percent reported less than eight bales. Obviously, neither the Brannan plan nor the present support law would solve their problem.

Price supports, however clever the formula, can only guarantee a higher living standard to the farmer who already has a reasonably high one.

Potent Female Sex Hormone Is Discovered in Licorice Root

New York, March 8 (AP).—Licorice contains a potent female sex hormone, two researchers reported today in the Journal of the American Pharmaceutical Association.

There are significant amounts of the hormone in licorice roots, they said. Licorice might become a new source of the hormone, used to aid women in menstruation troubles or in change of life.

The report was made by Christopher H. Costello, Columbus Pharmacal Co., Ohio, and Dr. E. V. Lynn, professor of chemistry, Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

The hormone in licorice, they said, is apparently estriol, one of three forms of the female sex hormone, estrogen. Estriol is a form that can be taken in pills.

The amount of hormone in licorice root varies, they said. The present method of extracting it is complicated, but might be simplified to make licorice a reasonable source of hormone. Some of the female hormones are made synthetically now. A main source has been urine from pregnant mares.

Licorice extract is used widely to flavor medicines, candies, tobacco and other products. But the amounts used probably contain so little hormone that it has no effect, Dr. Lynn said.

The finding is new evidence that plants may supply hormones and other complex body chemicals for use in medicine, they said. Traces of female hormones have been found in wheat, oats, yeast, cherries, date pollen, pussy willow and garlic.

The discovery grew out of study of an old compound marketed for women. Animal tests showed it contained several things with hormonal effect. Licorice was found to be the strongest source.

Equity Seeks to Improve Lot Of Negro Actors on the Road

New York, March 8 (NYHT).—Actors Equity Association is taking steps to improve the lot of Negro actors on tour, it was learned today.

A committee formed by Equity Council, governing body of the union, and including representatives of other interested theatrical organizations, is seeking methods of counteracting the discriminatory practices of hotels, eating places and transportation companies. William Ross, committee chairman, emphasized the condition exists elsewhere in the United States besides in the South.

Aside from the ethical features of the discrimination problem—something that prompted Equity in 1947 to refuse to permit its members to appear at the National Theater in Washington unless Negroes were admitted to the audience—there are economical matters to be considered, Ross said. Much revenue is lost in actors' salaries and to the theater in general because producers have been unable even to consider sending into the South troupes composed wholly of Negroes or those with a mixed cast.

Ross said the committee's approach to the discrimination problem would be "strictly an economical one" and would begin with an attempt to make more and better hotel accommodations available to Negro troupers. This could be done, he said, by sending out representatives to interview hotel operators, many of whom, said Ross, have found their business has fallen off since the war. For the promise of providing good accommodations at reasonable rates for Negroes, one or more hotels in a city would be designated "Equity hotels" and business from people in the theater and allied trades would accrue to these places.

Capital Transit Surplus Rises To $5,166,258

By S. Oliver Goodman

Earned surplus of Capital Transit Co. increased last year, despite a drop in net income for 1949.

This was revealed last night in the annual report to stockholders which showed earned surplus of $5,166,258 on December 31 as compared with $4,814,158 at the end of 1948. The gain was due to the transfer of $500,000 to surplus from a reserve for undetermined income taxes for the years 1942 to 1945.

The tax "windfall" more than offset a reduction in net income for the year. The transit firm earned $332,432 or $1.39 a share in 1949, failing to cover the regular annual divident rate of $2 a share. Last year's net compared with $390,665 or $1.63 a share in 1948.

Dips into Surplus

After paying all charges, including a $2 a share dividend, the company ended 1949 with a deficit of $147,568 which was stripped from surplus.

President E. D. Merrill in his report emhasized that "the continued downward trend of passenger traffic and the recent 10-cent-an-hour increase . . . (in wages) made a request for an increase in . . . fares imperative."

Merrill cited a 10.3 percent drop in revenue riders and a 3.63 percent increase in operating expenses, taxes, depreciation and interest charges in 1949. He pointed out that the increase granted employes by an arbitration board last December was "the fifth since the war."

Wolfson Pair Appointed

The annual report disclosed that two more of the Florida group, which acquired controlling stock interest last year, have taken official posts with Capital Transit.

Doran S. Weinstein has been appointed special assistant to President Merrill and Jack Surasky has been named special assistant to the vice president. Both Weinstein and Surasky are members of the syndicate, headed by Louis E. Wolfson of Jacksonville, Fla.

At the time of the election last fall, it had been announced that another member of the Wolfson group, J. A. B. Broadwater, became vice president and chairman of the executive committee.

Merrill said the transit firm cleared $750,000 in bank notes last year and in February 1950, paid off the balance of $54,007 in connection with the purchase of street cars and buses. Long term indebtedness of the company now is confined to 9 million dollars of bonds due in 1964.

VEPCO ISSUE: Offering of 100,000 shares of Virginia Electric & Power Co. $4.04 dividend preferred stock yesterday was reported oversubscribed. The shares were priced at $102.27. Proceeds will be used by the company to reduce outstanding bank notes by five million dollars and to finance construction outlays.

ODD LOTS: Dun & Bradstreet reports business failures in week ended March 2 dropped to 179, compared with 210 the previous week and 185 a year ago. . . . EARNINGS: Studebaker Corp. reported net income of $27,563,876, or $11.70 a share, for 1949, compared with $19,114,972, or $8.11 a share, in 1948. Last year's sales set a record of $473,119,000, up 23 percent. Other earnings statements:

2 Committees Vote $2 Billion More for CCC

By The Associated Press

Committees of both houses of Congress voted yesterday for a two-billion-dollar increase in funds for the Commodity Credit Corporation to use in supporting farm prices.

The House Banking Committee approved the increase by a vote of 17 to 2. There were no opposing votes in the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan told the lawmakers that the CCC may have as much as $6,300,000,000 tied up in surplus farm products by June 30, 1951, if this year brings bumper harvests.

If yields are only normal, he said the corporation's investments may reach $5,300,000,000.

On last December 31, the Government had $3,600,000,000 in the program.

The CCC uses money borrowed from the federal Treasury to take surplus crops off the market by lending farmers money on them or buying them.

The corporation's borrowing capacity is limited to $4,750,000,000 by the present law.

The Senate committee agreed to an amendment by Senators Magnuson (D., Wash.) and Morse (R., Ore.) which would prohibit the importation of foreign agricultural products under the reciprocal trade agreements program if they compete with domestic farm products under price supports.

The Senate wrote a similar amendment into a general farm price support bill last year but it finally was removed in conference committee after Democratic leaders predicted it would cause President Truman to veto the bill.

One witness after another urged amendments to increase the size of allotments to individual farmers.

A half dozen growers from widely scattered parts of Texas were among those who argued that the present crop control program is working severe hardships on many farmers.

A half-dozen growers from widely scattered parts of Texas were among those who argued that the present crop control program is working severe hardships on many farmers.

Members of the committee, led by Chairman Pace (D., Ga.), countered that continued boosting of production quotas would wreck the price support program.

Bill to Repeal Oleo Tax Goes To Truman

Senate approval yesterday sent to the White House a bill repealing all Federal taxes on oleomargarine, effective July 1.

The Senate passed the measure by vote of 59 to 20. The House cleared it Tuesday, 262 to 106.

President Truman had advocated repeal of the oleo taxes.

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) made a last ditch fight against the bill. He said it would "paralyze the agriculture" of dairy farm regions, and as a result "grass will grow in the streets" of industrial areas indirectly affected.

The dairy State members did write into the final draft of the compromise legislation these stipulations on colored oleomargarine:

1. When served in public eating places the individual patties must be triangular in shape or plainly labeled.

2. When sold in stores, there must be on the label of the package (A) the word "oleomargarine" or "margarine" in type as large as any lettering on the label, (B) a full statement on all the ingredients of the margarine; and each part of the contents of the package must be in a wrapper which bears the word "oleomargarine" or "margarine" in type not smaller than 20 point (about ¼ inch high).

Prince Georges Sets Up New Vote Precinct

Formation of a new voting precinct for the District Heights area was announced yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Election Supervisors.

The new precinct will be the Fifth Precinct of the Spaldings Election District and will be carved out of the old First Precinct. Voting will be at the District Heights Fire House. Formerly the residents had to go to Forestville to vote.

L. T. Gates, past president of the District Heights Citizens Association, and Town Commissioner C. O. Baldwin told the board that the approximately 1000 voters of their area should have a more convenient voting place.

The new precinct will include District Heights, Oakland, Clearview, Pumpkintown and the area between District Heights, Marlboro pike and Walker Mill rd.

The election supervisors also announced tentative selection of two voting machine custodians—George J. Seigel, East Riverdale, Democrat, and John B. Willard, Landover, Republican.

Second prizes of $15 each were awarded to Marilyn Kettler, 17, of 4726 Reno rd. nw., a student at Woodrow Wilson High School, and James C. Jennings, 16, of 1139 Stevens rd. se., an Armstrong High School student. Third prize—$10—was won by Jeanne Howes, 18, of 1812 22d st. se., a student at Anacostia High School.

Winning posters will be exhibited in the 11th st. window of Woodward & Lothrop's this week. All posters entered, some 600, will be displayed at the National Flower and Garden Show, March 23 to 29, at the National Guard Armory.

Horsemeat Sold as Prime Beef Tenderloin

Dallas, Tex., March 8 (AP).—State and Federal officials today sought the answer to a number of questions in the case of high-priced beef tenderloin that turned out to be horsemeat.

They wanted to know first of all where it was produced.

Thousands of pounds of horse meat—processed to resemble choice beef tenderloin—were seized in Houston and Dallas yesterday.

[Dr. J. W. Bass, Dallas city health officer, was quoted by the United Press as believing the horsemeat sales were being made on a Nation-wide basis. "We have evidence that some of the same shipment discovered in Dallas was sent to Tampa, Fla.," he told the United Press.—Editor's note.]

Most of the meat shipments came from Kansas City. A Federal investigation was launched there. An unconfirmed report at Dallas said it was believed the meat was shipped to Kansas City from Chicago.

Dr. R. S. Martin, chief of Houston's City Health Department meat inspection division, said an estimated 3000 pounds of horse meat had been sold to 12 high-class Houston restaurants since December.

"It was good, clean meat," he said, "but it was horse meat."

Martin said 1911 pounds of horse meat had been seized in Houston. More than 4000 pounds of horse meat, labeled as beef tenderloins, was confiscated at Dallas.

UAW Declines Million-Dollar Loan by UMW

Detroit, March 8 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers today turned down a one-million-dollar loan offered by John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to help finance the 43-day-old Chrysler strike.

At the same time, however, the UAW told Lewis it would be "happy" to accept "any outright contribution you or your organization may wish to make" to the Chrysler strike fund.

The auto union's answer was in a letter signed by President Walter Reuther. He said:

"Because of the generous contribution of UAW members in plants other than Chrysler and of organizations outside the UAW, we have not found it necessary to borrow money to support the strike and do not anticipate that we shall.

"Accordingly, while we cannot accept your offer of a loan, we appreciate your interest and the expression of solidarity of your organization."

In Washington, aides of Lewis told newsmen the money was offered the UAW as a loan because the mine workers' constitution bars outright gifts. They said that during the years when Lewis gave financial help in organizing CIO unions the aid was in the form of loans for this reason.

As peace talks with the company resumed today, the UAW threatened to raise its demands for each day the strike continues.

700 Strike at Joy Manufacturing Co.

Franklin, Pa., March 8 (AP).—Seven hundred Joy Manufacturing Co. workers went on strike at midnight in a demand for pensions, a wage increase and other benefits. The firm makes mining equipment.

Several hundred pickets ringed the three Joy plants here.

A spokesman for the International Association of Machinists said negotiations between the company and the independent union had been under way since December 28. The present contract expired February 28.

Anthracite Pact Ends Coal Strife

Peace arrived at long last in the Nation's coal fields yesterday with announcement by United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis that "complete agreement" had been reached with anthracite operators.

Lewis and soft-coal operators signed a new wage contract Sunday, terminating nine months of uncertainty and a four-week strike. The agreement announced yesterday will send 78,000 hard-coal miners back to work today.

While Lewis did not announce terms of the hard-coal agreement, they were understood to be equivalent to the wage increase of 70 cents a day and 10-cent-a-ton boost in welfare fund payments by the operators granted the soft-coal miners. As a result of the two agreements, both anthracite and bituminous will return to a full five-day work-week instead of the three-day week worked during a greater part of the protracted bargaining period.

Final approval of the anthracite contract is expected Tuesday after subcommittees from both sides have whipped it into acceptable shape. Negotiators said only "minor details" needed to be ironed out.

Shortly before Lewis announced agreement with anthracite operators, the United States Court of Appeals set April 26 for a hearing on the Government's appeal from the decision of a lower court acquitting the UMW of contempt charges. Judge Richmond B. Keech in Federal District Court last Thursday found the union innocent of both criminal and civil contempt. The Government charged the UMW with violating an order of Judge Keech to end the coal strike under the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Ruling Bans Using Union Ship Clause Retroactively

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that a legal union-shop clause may not be applied retroactively under the Taft-Hartley law.

Trial examiner George A. Downing held that an employe covered by a union shop contract may not be discharged because of failure to pay union dues which he owed before the union shop clause took effect.

The ruling involved charges brought by shipyard worker William Morgan Jones against the New York Shipbuilding Co., Camden, N. J., and Local 1 of the (CIO) Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America.

Jones was discharged by the company for failure to pay dues for July, August and September, 1947, although the union's contract, providing for a union shop, was not effective until January 6, 1948.

TO MANY a former Central High athlete, yesterday's vote of extinction by the Board of Education strikes a sentimental blow.

HOOVER

Such famous personalities as J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-Men, Lawrence (Biff) Jones, former football coach at Army, LSU and Nebraska, and Gen. Brehon Somervell, who headed the Army Quartermaster Corps in World War II, played on Central teams.

Even to Superintendent of Schools Hobart N. Corning, who supervised the transfer of Central's building and stadium to Cardozo by September, the vote must hit a nostalgic chord.

For Corning known as "Skinny" by his schoolmates, boasts about carrying the waterbucket for Central's undefeated 1916 track team.

With the dispersal of its students among the other white schools in the fall, the name of Central will be dropped from the Interhigh League standings.

It's ironic that Central should be the first of Washington's high schools to die out. It was the first to be organized, in 1882.

From 1893 when it won its first Interhigh football crown until the winter of 1949 when it won its last basketball title, Central won more city championships than any of its rivals.

From 1898 until 1921, its track teams were undefeated in dual meets, and won the national championships at the Penn Relays four times.

Central's coach during that era, Bill Foley, was twice named to the coaching staff of American Olympic teams. And Central's 1901 captain, Dick Dear, was the first schoolboy in the United States to run 100 yards in 10 seconds flat.

Central's baseball teams contributed Harris (Doc) White and Art Devlin to the big leagues and world series fame, and more than 50 others to the minor leagues.

Its basketball teams of the late 1920s roared through all opposition hereabouts, and won "national championships" at tournaments in Philadelphia and Chicago.

Organized Central High football teams were playing full schedules by 1886, before the sport was even introduced at Maryland and George Washington Universities.

In fact, it was Granville Lewis, "center-rush" on the 1892 Central team, who formed the first teams at G.W. in 1894 and Maryland in '97 (Maryland Agricultural College and Columbian College in those days).

Central elevens were taking on the colleges of this area with a good deal of success, until 1910. At one time, they were beating Georgetown, Catholic U., Gallaudet, Maryland, G.W. and Virginia.

First Ceneral athlete to gain national prominence was Art Devlin, who played third base on the New York Giant teams of John McGraw. He lasted in the National League for 15 years.

Next came Doc White, who helped pitch the famed Chicago "Hitless Wonder" White Sox to the 1907 pennant by winning 27 games, and then added two more victories in the World Series.

In 1901, the Central-Tech football rivalry, highlight of every succeeding year, was started. At that time, Central and Tech were three blocks apart on 7th st. nw., and the student bodies used to march en masse to the annual game at Union League Park, 15th and H sts. ne.

In the days before pro football moved into the limelight, the Central-Tech game attracted upward of 13,000 fans. In 1912, President Taft, along with 14,000 others, journeyed to the Georgetown University field to see Central beat Tech, 24-6.

Football at Central reached its peak between 1916 and 1922 when its teams were undefeated under Coach Cuvier Metzler. In 1917, Metzer's team set an interhigh scoring record by walloping Business High (now Roosevelt), 120-0. The game was called in the fourth quarter because of darkness.

Among Metzler's players who went on to gain college honors were End Jim Lemon and Quarterback Bob Newby in the 1922 Ivy League championship Princeton team, Jay Long, lightest fullback in Penn history, and Dave Wilson and Ray Bellenap, halfbacks, who starred at Illinois.

Slugging Nats Belt 18 (Count 'em) 'Homers' Off Nat Hurlers

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 8.—Buck Newsom is in Orlando a-hankering to improve both his social and fiscal positions. He wants on the Nats' payroll and back in the majors after a one-year sojourn in Chattanooga.

Technically, Newsom is still the property of the Nats' Chattanooga farm team, but they're finding it awkward to keep him down on the farm. He's badgering Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris for one more chance, which would be his fifth. Back in 1947, he tied FDR by winning a fourth term in Washington. Keeping him off the Nats' payroll has never been an easy task for Griffith.

POVICH

The Old Gentleman always has been a sucker for Newsom's palaver, and right now he's weakening to the point of suggesting to Harris that maybe it would be wise to give Old Bobo one more chance. Harris has been putting up a stiff resistance thus far, but Newsom's persuasiveness is never to be underrated.

"I could help this club," says Newsom, who said the same thing just before he joined the Cubs, the Browns, the Nats, the Tigers, the Browns, the Nats, the Red Sox, the Browns, the Nats, the Yankees, the Nats and the Giants.

HIS RELEASE from the Chattanooga club would be no problem, Newsom says. "There's a clause in my contract that gives me my release any time I ask for it." That is a somewhat staggering revelation, never before admitted by Joe Engel, Chattanooga president.

Right now Newsom is viewing Harris' Washington pitching staff with considerable hope that panic will soon set in, and they'll be looking in his direction for some help. "I'd say that Washington pitching is pretty dubious," says Newsom, which would be the understatement of the spring training season. When Harris looks beyond Ray Scarborough, he sees little of a solid nature.

NEWSOM IS pushing 40, though he mentions a more juvenile figure when stating his baseball age. And he has Griffith solidly on his side. Against him he has his own foibles. A couple of years ago, Griffith was ready to make him the manager at Charlotte, but shied off when Newsom's income tax problems reached print.

Last summer, Griffith had convinced his 1949 manager, Joe Kuhel, that Newsom should be brought up from Chattanooga to rescue the Nats from their horrible midseason skid which reached 19 defeats in a row. Finally, the transfer was all set when Newsom, ignorant of his forthcoming windfall, staged a sitdown strike against President Joe Engel of Chattanooga and refused to accompany the team to Little Rock. That bit of mutiny cost him Griffith's affections again.

'Tis said that Griff likes to have Newsom around as a pinochle partner, but actually the Nats' president has a genuine fondness for the big showboat who is a guarantee against a dull, if even a losing game.

IN THE FACE of Harris' resistance, Newsom is still hopeful that he will catch on with the Nats. "You know," he says, "Bucky likes me." If so, it's a recently acquired fondness on Harris' part. Just before Larry MacPhail bought Newsom from the Nats for Harris' 1947 Yankees, Bucky told newsmen, "If Newsom is available, he can stay available." That night MacPhail bought Newsom for the Yanks without Harris' knowledge.

Today, Newsom button-holed Griffith and reminded him, "It looks like your club is in a bad way for pitchers. None of 'em are ready. Why don't you tell Bucky I'm willing to pitch for him against the A's at West Palm Beach, on Saturday or Sunday."

Griffith was rather fascinated by the idea at a time when Harris couldn't honestly call on any pitcher for more than three innings. "Maybe it would be smart if Bucky let you work two or three innings. I'll talk to him about it," said Griffith.

"Three innings," snorted Bobo, "Hell, tell him I'm ready to pitch 10."

Hypnotist Has Most of Browns Under His Spell

HOW DR. TRACY APPEARS TO BROWNS. NO GLARING RESULTS FROM EXPERIMENT YET

Players, Doctor Dead Serious About Scheme

By Bob Myers

BURBANK, CALIF., March 8 (AP).—David Farrell Tracy, doctor of methaphysics, showman and master hynotist, says the time has passed for all the jokes about hypnotizing the St. Louis Browns into belligerent candidates for high honors in the American League.

Dr. Tracy, as the players address him, offers several forms of proof.

For one thing, the entire program to install confidence into this perennially low second division club is now serious business with the people it was intended for—the players.

He's even got the boys trying to hypnotize each other.

Tracy said he realized from the start that his engagement by co-owners Bill and Charles De Witt would draw widespread reactions of humorous trend. He said he told the players to expect it, and then to ignore it; that he would prove to their satisfaction that applied psychology and hypnosis could help them and the club.

At his first lecture he converted virtually all the players by suddenly throwing eight of them into a trance with one stroke. He said there were still several on the skeptical side.

So he chose one strapping rookie infielder, Owen Friend, and before Owen knew what was happening, he was in the firm mental headlock of Dr. Tracy. About the last vestige of skepticism vanished right there.

Harris Says Mound Staff Worries Him

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—Perhaps it was because 18 "home runs" by actual count, went sailing over the fences at Tinker Field today that Manager Bucky Harris mused happily, "I do think this club ought to hit well."

He was quite enthralled as Eddie Robinson, Irving Noren, Clyde Vollmer, Al Evans, Gil Coan, Eddie Yost, Al Kozar, and Sherry Robertson pounded batting practice pitches over the barriers, 340 feet distant in left field, 350 in right.

"If Yost and Kozar come up with some sticking for us, we shouldn't do too badly," said Harris. "I know Robinson will hit, he's a natural, and I'm convinced Noren can't miss. We're taking what I think is a good gamble on Coan. I really don't believe hitting is going to be one of our worries."

Robinson and Noren continued to set the slugging pace, knocking a flurry of homers over the wall against five different pitchers. Robinson's wallops were slightly the longer, but Noren was the more consistent in pumping pitches over the wall.

But Harris is plainly worried about the club's pitching. He frankly confesses that the Nats are taking the long gamble that such as Dick Weik has "arrived;" that Sid Hudson and Joe Haynes are recovering from arm trouble; and that his lefthanders from the Coast League, Rookies Steve Nagy and Lloyd Hittle, can win in the majors.

The less optimistic persons in the Washington training camp point to Ray Scarborough as the only solid performer on the Nats' staff; the only one with a winning record in the majors last year.

The dubious pitching situation is what is causing Harris to take a quick look at his Cuban rookie, Conrado Marrero, who reported to camp today. The Nats will start Marrero in their first exhibition game against the A's on Saturday at West Palm Beach.

Second Base Open

The barrel-chested Marrero, who won 25 and lost only 8 for Havana last season, has been the property of the Washington-owned Havana team for three brilliant years. In 1947 he won 26, in 1948 he won 20.

Aside from the pitching, the only position open on the Nats is at second base, and Harris today was frank in declaring, "I don't know who my second baseman is yet." He viewed it originally as a battle between Al Kozar and Sherry Robertson, but the Washington inflicted a damaging 88-80 NBA defeat on Baltimore last night at Uline Arena.

The bitter inter-city rivalry that used to pack them in here and in Baltimore drew a sparse crowd of 875. More people than that used to come over from Baltimore.

The game itself was the usual all-out struggle. The Bullets could ill afford to lose in their tight battle with Philadelphia and Boston for the remaining Eastern Division playoff spot.

By winning, the Caps took the series, 4-2, and insured themselves of a third-place tie with five games left.

Chick Reiser, former Bullet, and player coach Bob Feerick led a third-period rally that broke up a tight ball game. Reiser bagged four baskets; Feerick, three.

Then, for insurance, Bones McKinney returned to action by dropping four baskets in the final period while Freddie Scolari hit for three.

Their efforts were needed. Buddy Jeannette, player-coach general manager and general nuisance to the Caps, led a late surge that could have been disastrous to the home forces.

McKinney, out for three weeks with a broken hand, wasn't rusty at shooting and showed no reluctance at mixing under the basket in the rough contest.

Prof. Sawyer Plays Today's Game Today

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer of these articles has covered baseball in Philadelphia for many years as sport writer and radio commentator.

By Harry Robert

IN GRANVILLE HAMNER, the Phillies have a young shortstop they wouldn't trade for any other in the major leagues.

Hamner is a sensational fielder. He shows signs of becoming a .300 hitter. He's one of the fastest men in the league, has a magnificent arm. He plays with the fire and spirit of a Ty Cobb. There are other shortstops with qualities that add up to Hamner's. But they aren't 22 years old.

SAWYER

Yet this valuable star would not be in the game today but for the Phillies' professor-manager, Edwin Melby Sawyer, late of Ithaca College. Hamner himself admits it.

Hamner came to the Phils as a teen-ager during the war, too young for the draft, when all the clubs were desperate for talent. He was as erratic as any schoolboy.

One day in 1945, when he was not quite 18 years old, Hamner had the sort of day players moan about in nightmares. He fumbled practically every grounder hit his way. When he managed to stop one, he threw it away. He was charged with four errors that afternoon.

The Phillies sent the boy to their Utica, N. Y., farm club. Professor Sawyer was the Utica manager. Sawyer had learned a good deal about the psychology of young men while teaching science at Ithaca College from 1937 through 1943. This experience saved Hamner's morale and restored his shattered confidence.

"I went to Utica expecting to be released," said Hamner. Sawyer had every reason to can me. If he had given me the reception I was expecting, I probably would have quit baseball then and there."

RICHIE ASHBURN is another young Phillies star who is an example of how the professor's patience with young players pays off.

"There is none better than Eddie," says Richie. "Most people don't know what a good manager he is. His biggest asset is his ability to play today's game today. If we went into every game worried about the game we lost the day before, we wouldn't win many.

"Eddie is not a front runner. I reported to Utica right out of college, expecting to be sent to a lower league. Sawyer gave me a real chance. Many a manager would have gone sour on me for the lousy start I got this season. Eddie stuck by me."

When Sawyer sent Ashburn to the Phillies Florida camp in the spring of 1948, Richie was virtually an unknown. He proved such a sensation, he couldn't be denied a regular position in the outfield. He was the popular choice for "Rookie of the Year."

WILLIE (Puddin' Head) JONES, rookie third baseman who played under Sawyer at Toronto before coming to the Phils this season, says Eddie is "one of the finest men I ever knew."

"He knows more about handling young players than anyone else I ever saw," said Jones. "I was making quite a few plays wrong in Toronto last year. Eddie took me aside and put me straight.

"He never goes into a tantrum if a fellow misses a signal or

Keller Shows Old-Time Form at Bat

Lakeland, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Charlie (King Kong) Keller banged out a single, double and triple today to lead the "Lyons" to a 9-1 victory over the "Tigers" in the first intra-squad game of the Detroit Tigers training season.

The Tigers were cheered over the comback slugging of 34-year-old Keller who was given his unconditional release by the Yankees last winter. Back trouble ended a career with the champions that began in 1939. Keller turned down a manager's job in the minors to make a deal for himself.

Detroit, with one of the best outfields in baseball, decided to give Keller a chance and even let their expensive Dick Wakefield go. The former Maryland U. ace seems in excellent shape and is determined to stick with the Tigers, American League dark horse.

Bosox Regulars Win, Williams Gets Single

Sarasota, Fla., March 8. (AP).—The Boston Red Sox Regulars combined three hits with as many bases on balls to defeat the Yannigans, 5-1, today in their first intra-squad practice game, a six-inning affair.

Ted Williams, Billy Goodman and Rookie Catcher Sam White, who doubled, were the only varsity players connecting against Lefty Maury McDermott and Chuck Stobbs.

Vern Stephens' salary dispute with the Bosox is in the silent, waiting stage. In Long Beach, Calif., Stephens said, "I haven't heard a thing, so I haven't done a thing."

Phils Won't Trade Seminick Over Dispute

Clearwater, Fla., March 8 (AP).—President Robert R. M. Carpenter of the Philadelphia Phillies said today he won't trade holdout Catcher Andy Seminick because of their salary differences.

Durocher Calls Bums 'Team to Beat'

Phoenix, Ariz., March 8 (AP).—Manager Leo Durocher of the New York Giants today tagged his old Brooklyn Dodgers as the team to beat in the National League pennant chase.

Philadelphia, March 8 (AP).—Villanova's Wildcats, sparked by Paul Arizin's 30 points, defeated national invitation tournament bound Duquesne, 68-52, tonight before 8735 fans at the Palestra.

Pennsylvania turned back Duke, 68-50, in the opeper of the doubleheader.

Yale Upsets Holy Cross

New Haven, Conn., March 8 (AP). Substitute Stan Peacock shot two field goals in the last 90 seconds to lead Yale to a 66-62 upset triumph over Holy Cross in a thrilling basketball game tonight. It was the Crusaders' second straight defeat after they had won 29 in a row, including a carryover of three from last year.

With Bets on Overstaffed Infield

Tricky Rickey Beats Players Out of Their Wages

By Red Smith

VERO BEACH, FLA., March 8 (NYHT).—Branch Rickey was sitting in the bleachers with a floppy hat of white duck pulled down over his skull—lest bystanders be struck by stray thought waves—and with a microphone at his lips.

Smith

Rickey's voice roared through the unnecessary loudspeaker, directing the men on the field. You never saw so many men on one infield.

There were base runners on first and second. The first baseman was playing third. The shortstop was on second to hold the runner close to that bag. The second baseman was in his normal position.

There was nobody playing first. Instead, the right fielder crouched close to the foul line, about halfway between first and the plate. Like him, the third baseman was stationed halfway between third and home.

Counting the pitcher, this comprised a six-man infield, a peachy strategem thought up recently by Mr. Rickey while falling down an elevator shaft.

"We've got a tie score or maybe a one-run lead in the eighth or ninth inning," Brooklyn's revolving genius explained. "The other fellow has two men on base, none out, and a hopeless hitter—his pitcher, of course—at the plate.

He'll never hit a fly to the outfield. But he can bunt, and if he moves that vital run over to third base he'll probably beat me out of the ball game, because two good hitters will be coming up with only one out.

"Now, the other manager can't pinch-hit for his pitcher because that's what I want him to do. I haven't been able to do any big scoring against the pitcher all day, and I want him out of there. But he's coming up, so I'm jamming the infield to increase the chances of a double play. I'll make him hit, rather than bunt, and I'll go for the double play.

"Sometimes we pull in another outfielder and use a seven-man infield, leaving only one man in the outfield."

"I see," a fellow said. "That one outfielder is a retriever to chase the accidental inside-the-park home run."

"Exactly," The Brain agreed. "If a fly ball is hit anywhere except at him, it's a home run. By the way, we play the first baseman on third because the play is over there; that's where I want the man who can shift his feet and catch throws.

The Cerebum is runing 40 daily tests on the play while accountants keep painstakng records.

Pitchers Rex Barney, Ralph Branca and Phil Haugstad had the honor of serving as "hopeless hitters."

Barney was at bat. Rickey roared an offer to bet $1 against Barney's dime that he couldn't move the runner to third. Barney lifted a finger, signaling that the bet was covered.

"Atsaboy, Rex," yelled the coach at third. "Now you're ready."

Thus reassured, Barney popped out. Branca came up and was offered the same bet. He took the wager and filed out.

Pretty soon Barney was up again. He took two half-hearted swings. "Quick," Rickey howled to his lone outfielder. "Play right center." Rex hauled off and pulled a fly into left center for a home run.

Haugstad stuck a perfect bunt down the third base line and everybody was safe. Branca sliced a home run to right. Rickey cheered them with deafening enthusiasm when they got hits. Far more often than not, however, the defense forced the runner at third. Crude and unsure of their assignments on the cluttered infield.

"How do you stand now?" Barney was asked after a while. "A dollar-ninety ahead," he said. But there was a note of foreboding in his voice.

80,000 Trout To Be Stocked In Maryland

By Ralph Murdock

FRESH WATER anglers, take notice—the Maryland Game and Inland Fishing Commission expects to plant over 80,000 legal size trout, beginning about March 20. The open season starts April 15.

Murdock

We do not have the scheduled trout stockings but will have them for you as soon as the list of streams is made available by the commission.

We do have some dope for you on other warm water fish restocking in Maryland. These waters have already been stocked with the following fish: Deep Creek Lake, 2000 black bass, 600 crappie, and 27,000 blue gills. Big Pool, 1000 black bass, 5000 blue gills. Cascade Lake, 370 black bass, 22 crappie and 27 yellow perch. Monocacy River, 1500 crappie. Triadelphia Lake, 2000 black bass.

HERE'S SOME North Carolina trout news. Come April 15, the banks of western North Carolina's mountain streams will be lined with trout anglers. They can expect a banner season this year, primarily because of new restocking practices.

Already the Pisgah and Sherwood Forest areas have received 45,000 trout and the Nantahala National Forest 32,000. The restocking at the above locations was started in February instead of waiting until just a little before the opening of the season, as has been the practice in the past.

There is no closed season in North Carolina as far as bass are concerned. Much activity has been reported during the past few weeks from Lakes Chatuge, James, Lure, Nantahala, Cherokee and from the Fontana Dam.

STREAM FISHING for small mouths—believed by anglers to be a sport which separates the men from the boys—paid off for Earl V. Shiefford when he landed two nine-pounders in Panther Creek. Best spots for small mouth stream fishing in these parts are Wilson's Creek, the lower end of Buffalo and Elk Creeks, and the lower end of New River. The two hefties were taken with Creek Chub Beetles and Ding Backs.

Kratz Rides 7-Year-Old To Victory

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., March 8. With a bold rush through the stretch, J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime was up in the concluding strides to win in a four-way photo finish here today.

The 7-year-old mare was credited with a neck victory in the Bristol Purse featuring the midweek program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. Justin Funkhouser's Aura Lee was second and a head in advance of E. L. Poston's White Easter with Irving Beaver's Second Sight shunted into fourth position in the field of six.

Miss Prime, paying $3:40 as the odds-on favorite, was making her 1950 debut and she turned in time of .51, second best four and a half furlongs time at the meeting to date. The track was fast despite a light rain that marked the early portions of the card.

Palumbo Rides 2 Winners

Veteran Jockey Sammy Palumbo and Owner-Trainer Dick Pending teamed to win two races. Palumbo took the third with Alworth, A 7-year-old, paying $7.40 and came back to annex the seventh with Mr. D., which returned a $34.60 mutuel. In both events, Palumbo's riding was a definite factor.

Four favorites won on the card. Two figured in an $8.40 daily double pay-off the shortest so far at the meeting.

F. J. Wilson's Phantom Jinks won the first event at $3.40 under strong handling by Apprentice Jimmy McDermott while V. T. Carter's Baby Billy accounted for the second at $5.60 with Jockey Raymond Holland aboard.

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

The Southwest portion of the Nation is getting to be the chief source of future jockeys. Youngsters from that section learn to ride almost before they can walk and gain early experience booting quarter horses, the fleet cowboy ponies. Doyle Gardner is such a lad. He will make his Eastern debut at this meeting and hails from Clovis, N. Mex. Doyle, 19, is under contract to W. I. Jones of Washington and will ride for Trainer C. A. Cranford.

He had 18 mounts on the big-time West Coast tracks but failed to reach the winner's circle. A strongly built youngster of 104 pounds, Gardner does not appear to be the kind who will take on weight, hence has an excellent chance. "I owned a pony when I was 3 and have been riding ever since," he says. BILL.

Czech Girl Skate Titlist

London, March 8 (AP).—Brilliant Aja Vrzanova of Czechoslovakia won the women's crown in the world figure skating championships tonight, cutting United States hopes for a clean sweep.

The Americans earlier had won the pairs and men's title in the three-day competition. But Yvonne Sherman finished third behind the Czech defending champion. Jeannette Altwegg, British champion, was second.

Dick Button of Englewood, N. J., won the men's title and Peter and Karol Kennedy of Seattle, Wash., won the pairs title.

Miss Vrzanova scored 1,359.16 points to 1,345.71 for Miss Altwegg and 1,330.58 for Miss Sherman.

Miss Sherman, following the champion onto the ice, showed a much more lively routine filled with spins and whirls. But it failed to sway the six judges who were taken by the slower grace of Miss Vrzanova.

Three Americans improved their final standings by impressive free skating exhibitions. Fifteen-year-old Sonja Klopfer of Brooklyn, moved up from seventh to fifth and Virginia Baxter, from Detroit, advanced from tenth to eighth. Andra McLaughlin of Colorado Springs, moved from twelfth to eleventh.

Naval Receiving Leads

Naval Receiving Station won three matches while the Patuxent Naval Air Station and Quantico Marines each won two in last night's Potomac River Naval Command wrestling tournament.

Gene Defends Title Today in 'Sarazen Open'

By Frank Eidge, Jr.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 8. (U.P.) Pudgy Gene Sarazen, for the first time in eight years, is defending champion in a major golf tournament as the hot-shot professionals renew the $10,000 Miami Beach open tomorrow.

Genial Gene won this tournament the last time it was held. He had won it twice before and joked with newspaper reporters before teeing off that he considered the affair "like money in the bank." The reporters nicknamed the tourney the "Sarazen Open."

Now 48 years old, Sarazen won his last major title in the Miami-Biltmore Four-Ball playing with Ben Hogan in 1941. He defended it unsuccessfully a year later, the last time it was held.

Although his best golfing days are behind him, the little Germantown, N. Y., pro still swings a respectable club with his small fat hands. It was the same old knickerclad Sarazen who came in with a respectable 73 and a big grin in the pro-member tournament at La Gorce Country Club here Tuesday.

The two-over-par card was as good as Sam Snead's although Slammin' Sammy was so chargined he blanked out his score before it was posted.

Sarazen's own opinion was that an up-an-coming youngster is the man to watch in the Beach Open.

CIAA Tourney Opens Today

The fifth annual Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament opens today at 3:30 at Uline Arena with Lincoln University and Delaware State College slated to meet in the opening game.

At 5 p. m. Virginia State College clashes with Union University. North Carolina College meets Shaw University at 8 p. m. and the defending champion, West Virginia State College, faces Johnson C. Smith University at 9:15 p. m.

West Virginia boasts a 17-1 conference record and is heavily favored to retain the title it has won for the past two seasons.

SAWYER—From Pg. 17

The Sawyer Story

makes a bad play, but he'll sure tell him about it later. But no 'second-guessing'."

KEN HEINTZELMAN, the slim, frail-looking southpaw pitcher, never had a season over .500 in the majors before. Under Sawyer last year he won 17 and lost 10. He was voted Philadelphia's most valuable big league player.

"I have to 'feel strong' to be at my best," said Ken. "Every other manager I'd pitched for had me out there relieving between my starting days. Sawyer 'saves me' to work only in turn. That is the big reason I was a winner."

Gussie Wore Two Pairs of Panties, 'More Than Most'

Cairo, March 8. (U.P.)—Gertrude ("Gorgeous Gussie") Moran, whose lace panties created a sensation at Wimbledon a year ago, disclosed for the first time tonight that she had worn another pair underneath without lace.

"I wasn't being indecent at all," Gussie said in an interview, "under those lace panties, especially designed for me by Col. Teddy Tingling, I wore my own laceless panties.

"I'm sure I had more on than most other women playing at Wimbledon."

The American tennis star also reiterated that she would have another "hit" for this year's tournament. Gussie says she didn't know what it would be, but she was sure it would create as much comment as the lace panties.

C. U., Virginia Boxers Enplane For Eastern Meet

The University of Virginia's boxing squad arrives here this morning to join the Catholic University delegation to the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association championships at Syracuse Friday and Saturday. The two teams will enplane from the National Airport at noon today.

Three defending champs will be in the party. Catholic is led by team Captain Tommy Cronin, defending 125-pounder, while Virginia has Allen Hollingsworth and Grover Masterson along to defend their 130- and 135-pound titles, respectively.

Norvel Lee Only D. C. Boy To Win Title

New York, March 8. — Norvel Lee was the only District of Columbia fighter to win an Eastern Golden Gloves title tonight before 10,000 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Washington's other finalist, Eldredge Thompson, lost his 175-pound bout to John Boutilier of Lowell on a decision. The 23-year-old Boston University student clearly edged the Washingtonian.

Washington had tough luck in the lighter divisions as its three representatives failed to come through the semifinal round. Willie Davis, 135-pounder, forfeited his bout to New York's Tom Davis because of an injured side.

Little Paul Nicol, McKinley Tech student, lost a decision to Puerto Rico's Prudencio in a 112-pound bout, and Albert Anderson of Lowell applied a K. O. punch to Mario de Santis after 44 seconds of the second round to finish the District's 147-pounder.

Housing Bill Cleared for House Action

By a narrow one-vote margin, the House Rules Committee yester gave the green light for floor consideration of the Administration's middle-income housing bill.

Supporters of the bill predicted that the measure will come up on the House and Senate floors simultaneously next Tuesday, a procedure rarely followed by the Congress.

The measure would establish a national mortgage corporation with authority to make low-interest loans to non-profit housing cooperatives which are unable to obtain suitable financing from private lending agencies.

The loans could be repaid over periods ranging up to 63 years. The corporation would have a borrowing authority of $2,000,000,000.

Sander Trial Due to Reach Jury Today

Manchester, N. H., March 8 (AP).—Presentation of evidence in the Sander "mercy death" murder trial was completed late today.

The windup came amid clashes of words and medical opinions on how the cancer-riddled Abbie Borroto met death.

The case is expected to go to the all-male jury Thursday.

Dr. Hermann N. Sander is being tried for first degree murder on charges he killed the 59-year-old housewife and family friend "with malice aforethought" to end her suffering.

The mild-mannered country doctor frankly admits giving her air injections but claims she was dead at the time.

Verbal fireworks flared during the day as Attorney General William L. Phinney hammered at Dr. Robert F. Ford without shaking the defense medical expert's testimony that air injections could not possibly have killed Mrs. Borroto.

The prosecutor called back as rebuttal witnesses his own two pathologists—both of whom expressed opinions earlier that Mrs. Borroto died of air embolism induced by the injections.

Dr. Robert Miller, white-haired State pathologist, disputed the claim of the 35-year-old Dr. Ford that an autopsy showed a blood clot on Mrs. Borroto's arm would have blocked the vein.

A dramatic turn came when the vein of Mrs. Borroto's left arm—the arm in which the injections were made—was brought into the courtroom for the State pathologist to examine.

Earlier, Phinney implied that Dr. Ford had concealed the vein along with other data on an autopsy he performed six weeks after the patient's death.

Dr. Ford emphatically denied he had withheld any information and said he turned over "more material" to the State experts than they had requested.

Divorce Author Must Pay $50 Weekly Alimony

Annapolis, Md., March 8 (AP).—Attorney Louis S. Ashman of Baltimore, author of a book on divorce, must pay his wife $50 a week alimony, the Court of Appeals ruled today.

Ashman, 62, and Mrs. Olga E. Ashman, 60, were married in 1910, and separated in 1948.

Ashman is the author of four law books and a sociological novel that deals with the underlying causes of divorce.

The Ashmans "have lived rather a turbulent married life," Judge Stephen R. Collins wrote for the high court.

Mrs. Ashman's lawyer cited as "repulsive" a letter Ashman sent his wife in 1947 stating that "we are not on the same electrical or chemical circuit sexually."

Hospital Cut to Affect 10,000 Aditional Jobs Of Services' Civilians

LAYOFF: The proposed cutback of Army and Navy hospital activities will cause an additional 10,000 civilians in the military agencies to either lose their jobs or be transferred to other positions. Defense Secretary Johnson ordered the shakedown, which is being opposed by a congressional bloc.

Leon Keyserling is reported to have edged into the lead in the race to be appointed chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. Several well-known economists have reacted coldly to overtures regarding the top-ranking job.

Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) yesterday introduced a bill to set up an independent Federal loyalty review board with final authority to fire any Government worker. His measure would be unconstitutional, since appointing and firing power is the legal responsibility of the agency head.

Rep. Howard W. Smith, (D., Va.) has promised Federal workers to fight any plan to reduce their annual and sick leave. He predicts Congress won't enact any such bill this year.

Senator Douglas' proposal to limit employes to 20 days' annual and 12 days' sick leave is reported to have picked up several new Senate votes. It would be a good bet to pass the Senate if it were coupled with a plan to give severance pay to Government people. The Illinois Democrat is reported to be looking into the suggestion for severance pay to laid-off employes. Accumulated leave is now regarded as a form of severance pay.

Jay Deiss, a former Federal press agent, is the author of an excellent first novel, A Washington Story. His book is about a State Department secretary who gets involved in the loyalty program.

Frances Perkins is trying to draft a fair plan for layoffs in Government. The Civil Service Commissioner is insisting that the agencies be given the authority to keep an effective team of people who work well together. Many such teams, she says, have been broken up because, under present regulations, the agencies are forced to fire one or more persons on them.

Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson has ordered his officials to maintain an official personnel folder for each classified employe in the postal service. The folder will be used to file all personnel papers, actions, etc., on the employe, and it will follow him when he transfers to another job in Government.

The Federal courts will be asked to decide this question: Is a Federal agency supposed to pay the salary of an employe during the time he was suspended on loyalty charges if he is later cleared and ordered restored to his position? Navy, Post Office, and other agencies say they can't legally make the back salary payments. The law provides back salary can be paid when removal or suspension "was unjustified or unwarranted." Many agencies are contending that an FBI report that casts doubt on an employe's loyalty is justifiable grounds for suspension.

The House yesterday passed its first major employe bill of 1950—a bill to give World War II veterans in the postal service credit toward automatic promotions for time served in the armed forces. The standing vote was 176 to 18.

An amendment by Chairman Murray of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee to broaden the bill to include all veterans throughout Government was defeated by an 83-to-62 vote. Murray said his amendment would have Uncle Sam treat all veterans alike. Representative Miller (D., Calif.) pointed out a bill was pending in Murray's committee to give similar benefits to all other veterans in Government.

The bill now goes back to the Senate, which last year approved a slightly different promotion bill. The House bill would expire on July 1; the Senate measure would be effective for three years. The House bill also defined World War II service as between September 16, 1940, and June 30, 1946. Postal veterans could get pay boosts up to $400 annually under the bill.

Caucus Names Sinclair Virginia Circuit Judge

Manassas Attorney Wins by Rollcall Victory, Defeating Carrico, of Fairfax

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., March 8.—Arthur W. Sinclair, 37-year-old Manassas attorney, tonight was nominated by a joint Democratic caucus to be associate judge of the Alexandria-Fairfax-Prince William circuit.

The stunning 59-44 roll call victory for Sinclair over Fairfax Trial Justice Harry L. Carrico immediately precipitated an angry remark by W. Hill Brown, former Commonwealth's attorney of Sinclair's Prince William County, directed at Senator Andrew W. Clarke of Alexandria who placed Carrico's name before the caucus.

Takes Brown by Arm

When the caucus adjourned, Senator Harry Stuart of Russell was seen to take Brown by the arm and hustle him across the Capitol to the Senate chamber, where Clarke had gone from the House chamber.

"Now let me hear you apologize to him," Stuart heatedly told Brown. Clarke and Brown were seen to shake hands.

Stuart later said he didn't "have the slightest idea who the man was" but that "nobody is going to call a member of the Senate a liar in my presence without my doing something about it."

Brown had leaned over the desk Stuart occupied during the caucus to direct his remark at Clarke, the Russell Senator said.

For the newly authorized judgeship of the Thirty-fifth Judicial Circuit composed of Arlington County, former State Senator William D. Medley was the uncontested nominee.

Election of Medley and Sinclair by the General Assembly, which authorized the new jobs this session, is expected to take place today.

Sinclair's nomination amounted to a thumping personal victory for Delegate Frank P. Moncure of Stafford, who bucked a majority of the Sixteenth Circuit's delegation, which supported Carrico.

Medley was nominated by Senator Charles R. Fenwick.

Lynch Resolution Passed

The House of Delegates passed and sent to the Senate the Lynch resolution directing the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council to study the possibility of locating a Federal airport, to serve as an alternate to Washington National, in Fairfax County.

Lynch told the House that the Federal Government is expecting to build a new terminal at a cost of from 8 million dollars to 14 million dollars. The VALC would report to the Governor and General Assembly not later than October 1, 1951.

Cleaning up its calendar before it receives the 559-million-dollar budget bill from its finance committee Thursday, the Senate passed:

The Damm-Magruder bill to permit courts, as well as juries, to prescribe sentences on burglary convictions.

The Washington sesquicentennial bill, sponsored by Delegate H. H. Adams of Northampton, and Damm and Magruder, appropriating $50,000 or Virginia's participation in the District celebration.

The House, meanwhile, passed two Fenwick Senate bills. One would permit the State to pay more than the limit of $50 a month for old-age assistance without loss of Federal matching funds. The second would provide for a substitute justice of the Arlington County Court.

Indoor Pool Is Urged For Coolidge

A resolution urging construction of a floodlighted stadium and indoor swimming pool at Coolidge High School was approved last night by the North Washington Council of Citizens, meeting at the Sixth Precinct.

The council also accepted a report requesting a reduction in the number of liquor licenses to 1000 of Classes A, B, C, and D. The report was submitted by Ernest Pullman.

2 Budgets Submitted To Board

Ten more policemen and five more paid firemen are included in Arlington County's proposed general $5,552,721 budget for the 1950-51 fiscal year as presented last night to the Arlington County Board.

The budget, given to the board at a brief session by Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg, calls for a continuation of the present $1.80 tax rate per $100 assessed evaluation.

School Budget Presented

Lundberg also presented to the board the $3,705,190 school budget. This budget, however, calls for a 20-cent increase over the current school tax rate of $1.65 per $100 evaluation.

Both budgets will be discussed at a public hearing at 8 p. m. March 27 in the Arlington County Courthouse. Final action is slated on both on April 29.

In a statement submitted along with the general budget, Lundberg said that in order to "maintain" the present general tax rate, "many vital projects have not been included" in the County budget for the coming year.

Cites Three Reasons

On the other hand he saw more funds available for capital improvements in the 1951-1952 fiscal year for these three reasons:

(1) Reassessment of county properties; (2) Reallocation of funds from the State on the basis of the 1950 census rather than earlier population counts; (3) The proposal before the Virginia Legislature to allow counties to keep certain excess County Clerk fees.

The net proposed general fund for the coming fiscal year is $5,266,483.33 as compared to the current net general fund of $5,148,576.62.

A rise in the total assessed evaluation of county properties is expected to provide part of the increased net fund.

The expected total capital improvement outlay for the coming fiscal year totals $1,035,097, and includes the following:

$29,850 for a new fire station to serve the south side of Arlington County; $126,000 for various rights of way; $29,000 for a new equipment storage building; $235,234 for highways; $346,305 for water system; $171,318 for the sewer system, and $9500 for additional radio equipment and a central switchboard for the fire department.

Two of the five new firemen will be assigned to the Clarendon station, while the other three will be hired to man the new switchboard and fire department radio facilities.

Arlington Budget Seeks $100 Raise for Teachers

Arlington school teachers with a bachelor's or master's degree would receive $100 across-the-board increases next year under the school budget for the 1950-1951 fiscal year.

In the proposed salary schedule, minimum salaries for teachers with a bachelor's degree would go from $2400 to $2500. Minimum for teachers with a master's degree would be increased from $2700 to $2800.

The increase would not affect teachers with a normal school degree, who now receive a $2200 minimum. Of the 535 teachers in the system, according to Assistant School Superintendent Charles Walsh, only 30 to 35 are in this category, and the school board is not planning to hire more.

In a statement accompanying the budget, which was presented to the school board Tuesday, Superintendent William Early asserted that Arlington teachers at present receive $400 less on an average than teachers in Washington and Montgomery County.

The proposed increase would reduce this to about $230 on an average, he said.

Fairfax School Looted of $63 By Burglars

Burglars smashed their way through locked doors at Hollin Hall Elementary School Tuesday night, looting supply closets of an estimated $63 in cash, police reported yesterday.

After gaining entrance to the new Fairfax County school through a skylight, they ripped holes in the plywood panels of seven closet doors and then unlocked them, police said. They also smashed locks on a freezer and stole a small amount of ice cream.

The theft was discovered early yesterday when the custodian reported for work, according to Mrs. Elsie T. Fletcher, head teacher of the four-room school. The school, opened in November, is off Fort Hunt rd. below Alexandria.

Fairfax County police found a baseball bat on the scene, and indicated it may have been used to smash through the closet doors. The burglars missed only one closet, police said.

Takoma Plans Vote May 9 on Building Bond

The Takoma Park, Md., city council voted last night to hold a special referendum on whether the city should float a $200,000 bond issue to finance a municipal city center.

The council voted, 4 to 2, to hold the referendum May 9. Under the law, the referendum could not be put up at the regular city election March 28.

Voting in favor of the referendum were J. W. Nies, finance committee chairman; W. H. McClennon, L. A. Oosterhous and Ross Beville. Opposed were H. C. Heffner and John T. Parkerson. Councilman H. Brooks Perring was absent.

The council considered two financing proposals: (1) To borrow $200,000 at 2½ percent interest and repay the sum in 20 annual payments; and (2) to repay the sum in 10 annual payments at the interest rate of not more than 2 percent.

The council decided in favor of the 10-year plan and it will be the one put up to voters for approval.

Supporters of the 10-year plan estimated the interest over the 10-year period would be $22,000, a saving of about $30,000 over the 20-year plan.

They said they believed the city could float the 10-year bond issue at an interest rate as low at 1¾ percent.

The $200,000 will cover the cost of purchasing a site for the new center and all construction and furnishings.

Congress Plea

FDIC Asks $15 Million Headquarters

A Senate subcommittee was urged yesterday to approve legislation for a new permanent headquarters building in Washington for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The structure would cost an estimated 15 to 20 million. No site has been chosen. The agency is now scattered in three buildings, and pays $200,000 a year for its offices. Funds to build the new headquarters would come from Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation funds made up of insurance payments by banks, and not from the Federal Treasury.

The Senate group, headed by Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.) ordered Federal building officials to submit plans for the structure on which a cost limit could be calculated. The request followed testimony in favor of the bill by Senators Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), also Jess Larson, General Services administrator, and Maple T Harl, chairman of the FDIC.

W. E. Reynolds, Public Building commissioner, said the proposed structure should be of the type being built here to house the District and Appeals Courts at 3rd and Constitution ave. nw. Harl said he would prefer to have it more like the Federal Reserve Building.

Reynolds submitted figures suggesting Harl's plan would be about one third more expensive.

The subcommittee also heard testimony, mainly like that given Tuesday in a House hearing on the bill to authorize Government purchase of private buildings in the block which includes Blair House, temporary home of President Truman. Federal officials are urging approval; spokesmen for private interests are urging exemptions for the property in which they have a concern.

Rent Control, Daylight Time Action Delayed

Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) announced yesterday the House Judiciary subcommittee has decided:

1. To let the full House District Committee decide what recommendation should be made on daylight saving time for Washington this summer.

2. To postpone action until after Easter on a bill to extend District rent control through June 30, 1951, to give further time for estimating what the situation will be on national rent control extension, and on rent control in the Virginia portions of the Washington metropolitan area.

3. To have a hearing on March 20 at 10 a. m. on bills to establish District registration of professional engineers, and to revise the present system for registration of architects.

4. To postpone action to a later date on the proposed price fixing bill for the District liquor business.

Harris said the decisions were made in an executive session of the Judiciary subcommittee. No date has been set for the next meeting of the full House District Committee to take up the daylight saving time issue.

Armed Robbery Charge Holds Man In Another Case

The bond was set by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Price and Leroy Bundy, 28, of 2238 8th st. nw., are already under $10,000 bond for grand jury action in the robbery of $6900 in jewels from Mrs. Blanche Boldware, 125 B st. ne., last February.

Three Injured By Automobiles —Two Critically

Boy, 10, Sustains Fractured Skull; Man and Woman Hit by Car, Bus

Traffic accidents in the District yesterday sent three persons to the hospital, two listed as in critical condition.

Ten-year-old Marvin Baker of 2312 Sherman ave. nw., was injured critically about 8 p. m. at Georgia ave. and Lamont st. nw. Children's Hospital said his skull was fractured.

Police said a car driven by George A. Leissler, 21, of 1738 Massachusetts ave. se., knocked the boy down when he ran into it. The driver was not charged.

Five minutes later, William Freedman, 35, of 1053 Barnaby Terrace se., was struck at 14th and Constitution ave. nw.

Police charged the driver, Paul Conroy Sadler, 17, of 4206 Curtis rd., Chevy Chase, a student at Devitt School, with failure to give the right of way to a pedestrian and with passing at an intersection. Freedman's condition was undetermined at Emergency Hospital where he was admitted with a possible skull fracture.

Earlier in the day, Mrs. Thelma Bryan, about 50, was also critically injured when she stepped into the path of an Arnold Bus Lines coach on Pennsylvania ave. and 9th st. nw., police said. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible skull fracture.

The condition of Roland S. Robbins, 70, of 6215 14th st. nw., manager of the Trans-Lux Theater, was reported still critical last night at Garfield Hospital.

Robbins, once manager of the Keith's Theater here when vaudeville was on the two-a-day circuit, was injured Tuesday night when struck by a car at Piney Branch rd. and Sheridan st. nw.

$13 Million For Baltimore Pike Okayed

The House Public Works Committee yesterday approved a bill to authorize completion of the Washington - Baltimore Parkway from the District line to near Fort Meade, Md.

The bill now goes to the House, carrying authority for a 13-million-dollar appropriation. William M. Whittington (D., Miss.), Public Works chairman, said the bill will be presented to the House by Representative George Fallon (D., Md.) a sponsor.

Author of the bill is Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) Public Works committee members wrote an amendment into the bill to provide for linking up the parkway with the Washington street system. This link would be made from the District line at Anacostia Park to New York ave. ne., extended.

Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, had assured the committee the city would provide funds for the New York ave. extension if Federal money were provided for the Anacostia Bridge and the road through Anacostia Park within the District line.

The bill now authorizes the park road and the bridge. Cost of this portion would be included in the 13 million. Another amendment approved by the committee makes clear that the Bureau of Public Roads will be able to get the necessary right of way through the Greenbelt area, for the parkway.

Gas Rate Boost Of 10% Seen in Suppliers' Hike

The proposed boost in the wholesale price of natural gas will mean an approximately 10 percent hike in rates for nearby Maryland, Virginia and District users, it was learned last night.

The proposed $675,000-a-year increase will move company costs up 10 percent, Everett J. Boothby, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., estimated last night, adding that this amount "will have to be passed on to the consumers."

The rise would be pro-rated to users receiving gas from the Washington Gas Light Co. and its subsidaries, the Washington Light Co. of Maryland and the Rosslyn Gas Co., Boothby explained.

The Atlantic Seaboard Corp. and the Virginia Gas Transmission Corp., which supply the area firms with natural gas, asked the Federal Power Commission Tuesday to approve the wholesale rate increase. FPC staff experts were studying the petition yesterday, but no date has been set for a hearing.

The area firms have a 15-year contract with the suppliers with 12 years to go. The agreement provides for renegotiating the price each year for the period starting May 1, subject to the approval of the FPC.

Boothby said the Washington Gas Light Co. will intervene in the FPC hearing on the increase "to avoid any unwarranted increase in wholesale rates."

Collision Near Baltimore Injures D. C. Dentist

A car driven by a Washington dentist collided with a Greyhound bus carrying 37 passengers on the Pulaski hwy. near Baltimore yesterday, seriously injuring three persons including the dentist. Seven others required hospital treatment.

Police said the Washington man is Dr. Roland E. R. Lovell, 38, of 3647 New Hampshire ave. nw. He was taken to a Baltimore hospital with severe face and leg cuts, and a fractured left arm.

The others severely injured were Corpl. Harvey Coddaire, 41, of the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., fractured ribs and chest injuries, and Miss Mary Koesters, 31, of Baltimore, fractured nose and eye cuts.

Bridge Jams Cause Series of Accidents

Headlights were shattered, fenders crumpled and tempers frayed as a series of accidents jammed morning traffic between nearby Virginia and the District yesterday.

Metropolitan and park police estimated that about 20 cars were involved in accidents on the Memorial and Highway bridges and on connecting highways.

Most involved of the accidents, police reported, was one at about 8 a. m. on the Highway Bridge in which nine cars were damaged.

One car stopped and the car immediately behind it skidded into it, police said. Seven other cars piled into the wreckage. Total property damage was estimated at $2200.

Memorial Bridge had its share of accidents, too. At 8:40 a. m., two northbound autos collided. Five minutes later there was another pileup involving five cars. There were two other minor accidents before 9 a. m.

These units served as a sharp contrast to the general campaign progress, which is lagging. Only 15 percent of the $1,039,000 quota has been reported subscribed.

Another report luncheon is scheduled for 12:30 p. m. Friday in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Hall of Flags, with Jennings Randolph, assistant to the president of Capital Airlines, as speaker.

From Civil Service Commission: Library and Fair Employment Board.

Others were: Library Services, Office of Administrator, Federal Security Agency; Power Division, Interior Department; Bureau of Veterans' Reemployment Rights of Labor Department; U. S. 77% of Drive Goal Reached By Symphony

The National Symphony campaign for a $190,000 sustaining fund yesterday reached $146,113—77 percent of the goal—Samuel Spencer, drive chairman, announced at a report luncheon in the YWCA.

Spencer reported 11,261 gifts have been made—about 3000 more than last year—indicating the support base was broadening. Contributions from Anacostia and Prince Georges County, Md., increased from 4 to 10 times, he said.

The Navy committee announced collections of $8500 on a goal of $5000, while the Army and Air Force campaigners reported they were still below quota.

The figures were posted by Paul Hume, music critic of The Washington Post. After the reports were completed, Spencer pledged the drive would continue until the entire amount was collected. It was originally scheduled to end February 10.

200 Census Jobs Still Open in Area

About 200 area census-taker jobs are still open with the big decennial count due to begin three weeks from Saturday.

This was reported yesterday by Area Supervisor Albert Craig. He said about 125 of the jobs are in the District with the others mostly in Montgomery County, Md., and Arlington County, Va.

So far, more than 1000 enumerators—the people who will come to your door—have been hired in the metropolitan area. All will be paid on a piece-work basis, expected to average $8 to $9 a day for about two weeks.

The Washington metropolitan area, with an estimated 1½ million heads to count, is handled through five district offices, two of them in Washington. Craig's area office and one of the two district offices is at 1622 H st. nw.

Individual enumerators will cover anything from a single apartment house up to a dozen or so city blocks, depending on the density of population. They will receive no transporation allowance. Those who cover the rural areas in nearby Maryland and Virginia will be paid five cents a mile.

About 3000 applications have taken the written test for enumerator, but only around 1000 have passed, Craig said. A high-school education is required.

Writ Freezes Goebbels' Diary Profits

A temporary restraining order was issued yesterday in District Court to prevent the Government from immediately seizing $131,804 proceeds from the sale of "The Goebbels Diaries."

The action was brought by The Fireside Press, Inc. A hearing was set for March 16.

The fund earlier was ordered seized by the Alien Property Custodian as money belonging originally to enemy aliens and therefore vesting in the Government.

But the suit contends that the attempted seizure is illegal since title to the fund belongs to Fireside, which has American stockholders.

According to the action, the Government says the material in the book belongs to the unknown heirs of Paul Joseph Goebbels, the Nazi propaganda minister.

But Fireside, through its attorney Warren E. Magee, said that Goebbels, as a Nazi war criminal, had no property rights he could pass on to his heirs, and that the Government's contention cannot hold water.

Magee said that Goebbels' papers—7000 pages of them—were found strewn in the Berlin rubble in the Russian sector and were turned over as worthless to a German junk dealer. The junk man gave them to an American who in turn gave the papers to the Hoover Library at Stanford University, the suit said.

Embassy Black Tie Reception Greets 'Unofficial' Royal Visitor

PRINCE BERNHARD of the Netherlands, visiting briefly in town, took on the press yesterday morning at a news conference at the National Press Club. A luncheon at Blair House, given by President and Mrs. Truman, was next on his schedule yesterday, and last night he was honor guest at a dinner and embassy reception.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR AND LADY FRANKS
. . Arriving at the Netherlands Embassy for the reception in honor of Prince Bernhard

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, Prince of the Netherlands, who would rather talk aviation than politics, ended his first day in Washington at a dinner and reception at the Netherlands Embassy last night.

Tonight, he'll see an old friend, Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle (our wartime Ambassador to exiled governments in London) at an informal dinner to be given by Colonel and Mrs. Biddle at Greystone, their home on the edge of Rock Creek Park.

Tomorrow he'll soar into the skies again, piloting his own plane toward Canada on the last lap in a two-months good-will tour of the Western Hemisphere. His circuit took him to the Netherlands West Indies, South America and the West Coast of the United States before his Washington visit.

The 39-year-old consort of Queen Juliana had honor place at last night's Embassy dinner for 22. Later he greeted some 250 guests at the reception. Mme. van Kleffens had decorated the drawing room floor with masses of pink flowers, tulips, fragrant hyacinth and spice carnations. And her frock of matching pink was of satin.

Colorful Uniforms, Decorations, Missing

Since the Prince's visit was classified as unofficial and dress was "black tie," the usual colorful uniforms and equally colorful decorations for a royal visit had no place in the picture.

The dozen or so uniforms dotting the scene were the dark blue and khaki worn by members of the Embassy staff and the Prince's party.

The Indonesian Minister Plenipotentiary and Mme. Sumitro Djojohadikusumo were among the Embassy dinner guests. So were Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, she wearing a gray-checked taffeta dinner frock made with a short jacket and gray gloves to match.

The Danish Ambassador, Henrik de Kauffman, and Mme de Kauffmann, all in white, came on from the embassy, where they entertained at dinner. Among their guests were Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson.

The British Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks, was accompanied by Lady Franks, who wore a pale pink crepe gown.

The Mexican Ambassador, and Senora de la Colina were guests, as was Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador. Her husband is on a trip to Paris.

Also there were Stuart Symington, Secretary of the Air Force, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, former U. S. Ambassador to the Netherlands, and Mrs. Hornbeck, she in a black taffeta frock with a Chinese circle design embroidered in dull gold.

I saw Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Glover coming in with Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt in a sweeping red taffeta. Mrs. Dwight Davis wore red velvet and Mrs. Harold Burton, with the Justice, was in dark blue satin.

Then there were Senator Tom Connally and Mrs. Connally, she was wearing a full-skirted powder blue faille; Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, and General and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg.

Trumans Entertain Royal Visitor

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS was the luncheon guest yesterday of the President and Mrs. Truman. He was received with other guests in the drawing room of Blair House, and luncheon was served in the dining room of adjoining Blair Lee House.

Covers were laid for 14 around a table centered with yellow roses and blue and white sweet peas. A red-jacketed section of the Marine Band Orchestra played stringed music in the hallway.

Guests at the luncheon were William van Tets, who is diplomatic adviser to the Prince and also Netherlands Minister to Czechoslovakia; the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson; the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens; Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson; Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States, and the military aide to the President, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan and Mrs. Vaughan.

Greek Embassy Fetes Mitropoulos

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, recently appointed permanent conductor of the New York Philharmonic, was honored last evening at a reception given at the Greek Embassy by the Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis. The reception followed the concert at Constitution Hall, in which Mr. Mitropoulos made his first appearance as guest conductor with the National Symphony Orchestra.

A buffet supper for 100 was served with many special Greek dishes, prepared by the embassy's chef. At a dinner before the concert the Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis had as their guests the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Webb and Representative James Grove Fulton.

Girl Thinks If Man's Love Were True, He Would Have Married Her Six Years Ago, When They First Started Living Together; She Asks For Guidance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is sordid and difficult, I know. Eight years ago, when I was 21 and married to an alcoholic whom I later divorced, I met a man 15 years my senior. We formed a liaison that has existed ever since.

Up to the time I got my divorce, six years ago, we had planned to be married—or so I thought. But marriage did not materialize, and wrong though I know it to be, we have shared the same living quarters anyway.

I am employed and Hoyt is self-employed. In the past several years he spends all his evenings at his work, and in fact all his spare time, so that I am nearly always alone, weekends included. I wouldn't mind being lonely if his long hours offered us any future, but I can't possibly see any for us.

She Sees Folly of Their Setup

AFTER knowing a person as long as we've known each other, one naturally becomes attached. But I believe if this had been really true love, Hoyt would not expect me to live this way indefinitely. However, I am not asking for pity, for I know if I had backbone I wouldn't have drifted into this predicament; but I do see the folly of such a set-up and I want to straighten it out for the good of both of us.

I am considered intelligent and attractive by my friends and have refused to go out with many unmarried men who have asked me. I repeat, I want to do what is best for Hoyt and myself, and I want your guidance. Please answer soon. L. L.

Man Can't Take Positive Steps

DEAR L. L.: Speaking in terms of psychological trends, Hoyt is remarkably withdrawn from the ordinary paths of self-reliant masculine behavior, it seems. And the older he gets, the more he tends to evade or fade away from any kind of real human relatedness—whether legal, illicit or casual-social.

In short, he doesn't face life; and he cannot fetch himself to make a positive decision—yes or no—about anything important. And being of this impotent temperament, he cannot go through with marriage to you, nor will he directly precipitate a separation either.

Very likely you courted a confidential relationship with Hoyt to start, in quest of safety in a supposedly strong man's love. And I daresay you entered the liaison in naive confidence that marriage would follow when you were ready.

No doubt Hoyt participated in the drift on the unconscious theory that because he didn't start it, he wasn't responsible—the more especially as you were of age and married, with the experience to know what you were doing (presumably). And on that theory he could excuse himself for balking at marriage later—at which time you clung to his company on any terms, for lack of other anchorage.

Girl Needs Trained Psychological Help

HIS EXCESSIVE preoccupation with work, more recently, is his way of escaping your anxious pressure for clarification of your status. And this flight from the issue is the best answer you will ever get from him, I think. As to what it means, it signifies that he tends to reject rather than espouse you, if a choice is forced on him. My advice is to face that implication and try to establish yourself independently without further delay.

Unless you take steps to outgrow this stalemate, you cannot experience a worthwhile life. But in order to step into life on your own power, you need first to discover why you've been a clinging vine until now, and why you choose the wrong kind of men—the kind who are in flight from mature standards, hence aren't disposed to love responsibly. So ask a neighborhood clergyman to refer you to a good psychologist or counsellor in family relations, who will help you correct the emotional kinks in yourself that have cost you so dear. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Pumice Powder Best Bet for Stain On Wood; Cut Walnut Meat Fine For Scratches, When Color Is Light

DEAR ANNE:
I put a plastic tablecloth on a bare table and the pattern of the cloth came off on the table! Do you know anything that will take it off.—A. R. H., Washington.

It's likely you can get these marks off with the same combination that effectively banishes many other stains on wood finishes. This is powdered pumice stone (or rotten stone) and linseed oil. Buy them at a paint or drug store. Dip soft cloth in oil, then in the powdered stone and rub with the grain of the wood.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you advise me what I can use to touch up scarred places on bleached mahogany furniture?—L. E. P., Washington.

Rubbing a cut walnut meat along scratches on light furniture will make them less noticeable. There are also scratch-removing sticks in light shades and other products sold by paint stores to use in treating scars and blemishes.

DEAR ANNE:
We are planning to paint our radiators. Do you think it would be best to use the silver or gold paint or paint them in a color.—P. R. N., Frederick, Md.

Since most radiators aren't too charming decoratively, I think you'll be better pleased if you paint yours the same color as the wall. They will then merge into the background.

Another thing: Paints containing polished metal flakes—such as the silver or gold—interfere with the passage of heat. Ordinary flat wall paint gives the best heat radiation. Enamels are also effective and somewhat easier to keep clean.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me anything about a new electrical vaporizer I read about that will purify the air in a room and keep down colds in winter?—Vera M., Arlington.

I believe you have in mind the glycol vapor purifiers that recently went on the market. These consist of tank, wick, and lighted bulb. Glycol is poured in, heats from the bulb, and vaporizes.

Makers of the device have affidavits indicating you can rid a room of bacteria or murder all the microbese in a mansion by regulating the flow of this vapor. The purifiers are sold in the housewares department of a local store. (Telephone National 5100.)

DEAR ANNE:
A while back one of your readers asked for an address to which one could send Christmas cards. All greeting cards will be very welcome for use in school work at the following:

Cumberland Mountain Mission House,
Fort Blackmore,
Scott County, Va.

Any leftover gift wrappings, crayons, coloring books, scraps of cloth, toys and dolls will be greatly appreciated, too, for use in the kindergarten.

Clothing and shoes—and they needn't be in the latest style—for both children and adults are also needed for this mission, started by a nurse and teacher some 40 years ago. It's the area that is the scene of the book, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," by John Fox, jr.

Baked Maine Lobster De Luxe

This baked Maine lobster recipe is the prize winner chosen from more than 100 lobster dishes submitted in the State of Maine Lobster Recipe Contest conducted by the Department of Sea and Shore Fisheries and the National Brewing Co. The recipes were judged by experts of "Gourmet" magazine. The winner is an amateur chef, E. P. Hutchinson, of Glen Falls, N. Y.

Baked Maine Lobster De Luxe

Drop four large and three small fresh Maine lobsters into a kettle of boiling salted water and cook for 10 minutes. Set the four large lobsters to one side belly up so juice stays in the shell. Remove meat from the three small lobsters. Cook shells in two cups boiling water with a few stalks of celery, two sprigs parsley, three fourths teaspoon salt and a pinch of pepper for 15 minutes and strain for stock. In double boiler melt two tablespoons butter, add one half cup cream, yolks of two eggs and cook sauce, stirring as it thickens; add one cup of the lobster stock. Cook until the consistency of cream sauce. Remove from fire, add lobster meat and one cup small toasted bread cubes and two tablespoons sherry. Split the large lobsters. Remove intestinal vein, stomach and liver, cut under shell from tail so meat will show, crack large claws, fill body cavity with dressing, be generous; sprinkle with bread crumbs. Bake in hot oven (500 degree F.) for 10 minutes—set under broiler to brown crumbs if needed. The dish can be prepared all but cooking in oven several hours before serving. Pass with melted butter. Yield: Four portions.

Chic Chicks:

Like Mama, Like Baby Is Bare Truth

Babies' clothes are getting more daring.

This shocking intelligence was imparted yesterday at the Baltimore-Washington Children's Wear Show, which opened at the Willard for three days.

Thus, for young women who have barely learned to walk, off-the-shoulder dresses, deep necklines . . .

But, perhaps nowhere, allowed one manufacturer's representative, will the young group be so sensational this summer as in color combinations. Dresses will feature such combinations as blue and deep brown, pink and brown.

On the diaper front, another manufacturer revealed that they're now out in colors. Snaps on diapers are on their way, he said—they're already on diaper holders. Bad thing about diaper snaps, he said, is that there's no adjustability to thin or big-tummy baby.

Trend in very young is toward self-help clothes; snaps and grippers on the panties—day is coming possibly when buttons will be extinct.

2000 Attend Air Force Fair

About 2000 service folk dropped into Fort Myer gymnasium yesterday for the fair given by the Air Force Wives Association.

Band concerts, fashion parades, hobby exhibits, cake sales and pet shows made it a colorful event.

But perhaps one of the most popular drawing cards of the fair was the sale of discarded Army uniforms. Airmen, who are now busily getting outfitted in their new "blues," donated the khaki uniforms they used to share with the Army for sale at the fair. And the Army men poured in to take advantage of the low prices.

Mrs. Sidney Grubbs, wife of the commanding officer at Bolling Air Base, and chairman of the uniforms booth, reported she sold more than 200 complete uniforms. A special dressing room was rigged up for the men who didn't want to take a chance on the sizes.

Among the items to be shown are a collection of singing birds—mechanical birds of life-like color and detail, music boxes, firearms, carriage lamps, prints,

Sewing for Youngsters?

Copy Cats Make News In Junior Fashion Whirl

FASHIONS for youngsters this spring will have a grown-up air. They will be made from the same crisp, colorful fabrics that are used in mother's clothes and they will be styled with winsome, pert detail.

Those who enjoy sewing for children and plan to enter one or more garments in The Washington Post Sewing Contest will be pleased with the wide variety of styles and fabrics that are recommended for the small fry this season. Contestants in either of the two children's clothing groups will also have an opportunity to create fresh, novel costumes. For the garments may be made either from a standard pattern or from an original design.

Both groups in the children's division of the contest—that is, clothes for ages 2 to 7, and 7 to 12—attract more beginning seamstresses than any other classification. Modest fabric requirements plus the ease of dealing with small pattern pieces and dainty designs give mothers and big sisters the impetus to sew toddler garments at home.

Little Girl Trends

FOR little girls you can select from any of the following "trend" styles:

Old-fashioned middy top blouses over pleated skirts.

Checked weskits worn with pleated skirt; boxy flannel jackets with tiny starched collar and big bow tie.

Party dresses made from wonderful, dreamy fabrics like swiss organdy, taffeta, tissue faille and nylon jersey, all of which take to draping, shirring and youthful bouffant lines.

Sleeveless Style

MOST popular and practical type of frock for the 2-to-6 year-old group is the sleeveless style with matching jacket or capelet. Even one-piece designs can have a two-piece effect, created by attaching a white pique bodice to a circular, gored shirt of navy blue. A navy pique capelet which unbuttons to reveal a sun dress in white pique is another idea.

Pinafores of dark organdy, worn over pastel chambray frocks are cunning new fashions for tiny tots.

Short, fitted windbreakers, cardigans, weskits and boxy style jackets fit the approved suit silhouette for girls from 7 to 12 years. A favorite is the "little boy" suit in navy flannel with pleated skirt, short boxy jacket and white, detachable Peter Pan collar. Weskits in bright, checked patterns or vivid colored linen may be worn with sleeveless blouses.

Fleecy Toppers

FLEECY toppers, imitating those for teenagers, may also be worn by a 10-year-old. They are most effective in muted pastel shades. These outer garments may be any length this spring, ranging from waist to full length.

Outstanding color for cotton and rayon fabrics is navy blue, and, again like fashions for the older crowd, will be most effective when combined with red and white. Pique collars and cuffs on navy toppers are sophisticated details for little girl outfits.

NEW, and more feminine WAC uniform, designed by Hattie Carnegie, made its official debut yesterday. It was worn by Col. Mary A. Hallaren, WAC commander, at yesterday's luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at the Statler Hotel. Made of taupe-colored wool, the jacket is fitted and finished with softly tailored details in the best Carnegie manner. Insignia have a dull gold finish to blend with the muted shade of the fabric. Curving brim replaces the straight brim of former WAC hats

Stylists Decry Shingle Bob

No More Clip-Joints for Them!

By Peggy Preston

FEWER hair styles have been shorter lived than 1949's version of the shingle bob.. It may have gone over big back in the 20's, but few of today's girls have been willing to give it more time than it takes for their locks to grow out again after one severe clipping.

And that, precisely, is the major problem in the hair styling field this spring. What's to be done about the shingle, or too-short hair cut, that is beginning to grow out? How to ease the painful transition from "square" wisps to soft, even curls?

Stylists Solution

Happy to answer these questions are stylists and hairdressers, the country over, most of whom decried the return of the cropped hair-do a year ago. Elizabeth Arden, Ann Delafield, Lura de Gez are but a few of those who deplore the "barber's clip" and are ready to help us cope with straggly strands.

Here are some of the points they make:

1. Proper tapering will help make the hair manageable during the lengthening process.

2. In having the hair shaped and thinned, keep the entire hairline short until the crown of hair has grown to an equal length.

3. Use a good hair pomade, not brilliantine. Pomade rubbed into the scalp will help tremendously to keep the wispy ends in place.

4. Curl ends of the hair with a soft permanent. This keeps the hair neater and easier to manage.

5. For obstinate, bristly hair, try a light feather bang for a softening effect over the brow.

6. Small hair pieces may be pinned in for a fuller effect, while your own hair is lengthening.

Considering Hairdos

When the hair is grown out to an even, 3-inch length once more, what then?

According to Miss Arden it is then time for a woman to sit down and consider the shape of her face, before deciding on a permanent hair style. If the face is round and short, then the hair should be arranged close to the head; for a long, narrow face, with delicate features, softly brushed locks, fluffed out at either side form the ideal hairdo.

Exact lengths are no longer being recommended, although hair that sweeps the shoulder is frowned upon. Perfect for most women is hair that is long enough to form a cluster of curls at the nape of the neck. With a firm curl, this cut is good for formal evening clothes. Looser, it makes a daytime casual style.

BASIC CUT, with soft row of ringlets banding the back of the head, is called "Town Talk." From this foundation the hair can be brushed and combed into a variety of styles

WHEN your shingle cut starts to grow in, frequent trimming helps keep the head shapely and well groomed. Here the longer hairs at the sides are softly waved close to the head, the ends brushed toward the nape of the neck

'Small-Minded Men' Blamed For Defeat of DP Measure

The Senate action yesterday in delaying consideration of the displaced persons liberalization bill was the result of "little technicalities often used by small-minded men to defeat a measure," a Displaced Persons Commission member said last night.

Edward M. O'Connor, speaking to 50 members of the Polish Club of Catholic University, said the technicalities helped confuse the Senate.

"Meanwhile there remain millions of people in Europe who have been looking to this measure for hope for themselves, their wives and their children," he declared.

He said charges that DPs were agents of Russia did not coincide with Stalin's statement that they were "seeds of Soviet disaffection."

Further, the security regulations of the Displaced Persons Commission "put to shame the Immigration Department regulations," O'Connor said. In addition to the usual immigration investigation there are seven extra steps in checking, he explained, and all admitted must report on their activities semiannually to the commission.

Some of those waiting for an opportunity to come to America are men separated from their families who went back to their old homes seeking reunion, and when they couldn't find their relatives, wandered "all over the country" looking in vain, O'Connor said.

Vote in House Due on Hike In Allowances

By The Associated Press

House members may soon vote on a bill to give themselves another $500 a year in expense money.

A House Administration subcommittee is considering a bill that would raise the annual telephone and telegraph allowance of House members from $500 to $1000.

The committee has held one hearing on the bill and is scheduled to consider it again, probably next week, with strong indications that it will recommend passage.

Many members say the present $500 allowance for official business messages is inadequate and is unfair in that it gives nearby members more messages than it provides for those from distant districts.

Not all members use the entire $500 each year, but many say they spend much more than that and must make up the difference out of their personal funds.

The $500 is in addition to the $2500 general expense allowance given all Representatives. The $2500, voted in 1946, is tax-free and the members are not required to account for its use. Most members draw it as part of their salary.

With Changes

Farmers Union Backs Brannan Plan

Denver, March 8 (AP).—The National Farmers Union today indorsed the Brannan Plan in a program which proposed sweeping changes for American agriculture.

The program includes:

1. Compulsory application of marketing quotas "to large-scale operators who refuse to comply with production programs, so they will not be able to disrupt those programs."

2. Extension of production payments in the Brannan Plan to storable as well as perishable commodities.

3. A Nation-wide system modeled along the lines of Rural Electrification cooperatives.

4. A conservation works program, employing under-employed farmers to do conservation work on their own farms or those of their neighbors.

5. A new type of Federal credit at low interest rates to enable farmers to shift from less-needed to more-needed commodities.

6. Establishment of fair production minimums to protect small producers from having their income cut to "intolerably low levels."

7. Setting of production minimums in commodity units rather than acreage allotments.

8. A new Government program for purchase of large farms as they come on the market and the subdivision of those farms.

9. Federal aid to education, plus Government assistance like that given to World War II veterans for any youth wanting a college or vocational education.

10. Creation of valley authorities.

Happy Morgan Is Divorced

An Interior Department engineer who testified that he gained 30 pounds after he and his wife split up in 1946 was granted an absolute divorce yesterday in District Court.

He is Joseph M. Morgan of the Bureau of Reclamation, and residing at 1750 Church st. nw. The wife is Marjorie B. Morgan of 1407 N. Utah st., Arlington, Va.

Morgan, who charged desertion, said that since they parted and the strain of an unhappy home-life lifted, his weight has gone from 135 to 165 pounds. He is about 5 feet 10 inches tall.

In granting the divorce, Judge Matthew F. McGuire awarded Mrs. Morgan, who said she has a heart condition, alimony of $226 monthly.

The Morgans married in 1925 and have three sons, 24, 22 and 20 years of age.

Mrs. Morgan did not appear in court to contest the suit but in answering his claim stated that after her husband left the Army, he said he was tired of family life and felt like "coming and going as he pleased."

Court Studies Prince Georges 'Slots' Ruling

Annapolis, Md., March 7 (AP).—The Maryland Court of Appeals today had under advisement an appeal against a ruling that killed the 1949 Prince Georges County slot machine law.

The law was approved in a county-wide referendum but Circuit Judge Charles Marbury ruled it unconstitutional.

Attorneys for Hal B. Bell of 3424 Rhode Island ave., Mount Rainier, argued that Judge Marbury erred in deciding the law was unconstitutional.

They contended that one type of device that would have been authorized "is for amusement only and dispenses no other award of any kind."

"The fact that other licenses authorized by the act cover devices that make awards does not detract from, but rather adds to the amusement of the device," they said.

C. W. Hendrix, coin machine operator of Montgomery County, filed the suit that produced Judge Marbury's original ruling. Hendrix went to court because he objected to a requirement in the law licenses to operators be restricted to Prince Georges County residents and property owners.

Because of the Marbury ruling, the Prince Georges County Commissioners denied Bell a slot machine license when he applied for one. Bell went to court, only to have the same judge deny his plea for a writ to force the commissioners to honor his application.

At the appeal hearing, Bell's attorneys disputed Judge Marbury's contention that the title of the law was misleading.

Warrant Held Legally Issued In Raid Case

Annapolis, Md., March 8 (AP)—The Court of Appeals frowned on a Baltimore County search warrant today but held it legally sufficient for police to raid an Essex bookmaking establishment last spring.

The search led to the conviction of William R. Kapler on seven gambling counts.

Kapler, who owned the raided garage behind his Essex apartment, was sentenced to six months and fined $2000 in Baltimore County Circuit Court. The Court of Appeals upheld the verdict.

The warrant had been issued on an affidavit by county police Sergt. C. Albert Eitemiller, based partly on eyewitnesses reports of an unidentified informant.

Such an anonymous "recital" of facts is dangerous, Chief Judge Ogle Marbury commented. It could lead to abuses that "cannot be tolerated," he added.

But Eitemiller's affidavit also included "personal observations" of Officer Edner Story. This was "proper information" to justify a warrant and it was issued legally, the chief judge said.

Rev. Mr. Kopf to Speak

The Rev. Carl Heath Kopf, pastor of the First Congregational Church, will speak at the 148th anniversary dinner of the First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., at 7:30 p. m. today at the church.

Dr. Sean Sheahan, president of the Douglas Hyde Gaelic Society, will speak at 9 p. m. today at the Roosevelt Center, 13th and Upshur sts. nw., under the auspices of the District Recreation Department. Dr. Sheahan will discuss the use of Gaelic in European courts during the seventh century.

One on the Aisle—

A Tip on a Movie That You'll Like

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE: Joe David Brown and his Fran, up from their Eastern Shore writing hideout, talk enthusiastically of Metro's treatment of his nostalgic book, "Stars in My Crown" . . . This won't be along for a spell, but I saw it the other day before meeting the Browns and will jump a release date to assure you you'll like this picture . . . It's a roving, incident-dotted story of a Southern preacher shortly after the Civil War, with a winning performance from Joel McCrea in the leading role and another fine one from James Mitchell, the dark, bony-cheeked young dancer who scored in the original "Brigadoon." . . . Mitchell is a different sort of type who should click . . . Brown's a former Birmingham and New York reporter who took the plunge into freelancing many reporters dream of; Fran, once an Army nurse, prodded him into it . . . "Stars in My Crown," largely fiction despite its autobiographical tone, began as a series of short pieces, then a book . . . Raymond Massey read this, decided it would make a fine stage vehicle for him, paid $500 for the option; a few days later Metro offered to buy the book for the films, which would require a release from Massey . . . Massey agreed to sell the dramatic rights back to the author for $10,000, amounting to the easiest $9500 anyone ever earned in a few days . . . The Metro offer was big enough to take care of middle-man Massey's $9500, which Massey accepted, writing Brown "a thoroughly pleasant letter." . . . The freelancer bears Massey no grudge for his easy profit on "Stars"; he shrugs, "That's the way things work." . . . So he went back to his typewriter, after doing the Hollywood story treatment, whacked out another novel, "The Freeholders," now in the bookstores.

PRODUCER John Kenley this afternoon will be holding auditions at the Gayety for his Lakewood Park, Pa., summer theater season . . . The auditions will follow an understudy rehearsal for his "Barretts," and stage aspirants and drama students are invited to watch the rehearsal and the auditions . . . Lakewood Park, I erroneously placed near Scranton, but that was 70 miles off . . . It's in Schuylkill County, near Shenandoah, Mahanoy City and Hazleton.

PLAYERS from four local groups will be appearing in tonight's finals of the One-Act Play Tournament at the Roosevelt High Auditorium, 13th and Upshur sts. nw. . . . The groups and their plays: Montgomery Players in "Paragraph at Sam's"; the Foundry Players in "A Night at the Inn"; the Alexandria Little Theater in "Knives From Syria," and the Neighborhood Players in "Jinxed" . . . Drama editors of the four Washington papers will be the judges.

REMEMBER John A. Kirkpatrick's "Charm" last summer at Olney? . . . That dip back into a comedy of the past was one of the merriest surprises of Olney's season, and there were reports it might get a Gotham production . . . Now it looks as though it will . . . Harry Elberbe, who directed the play here, has been asked to repeat by Hugh Duffy, jr., and Thomas F. Haynes, jr., who holds an option on the 25-year-old comedy . . . And S. Syrjala, Olney's scenic whiz, is to repeat his assignment; Paula Trueman is set, too, for her mad role, and if the boys are wanting a good male lead, how's about prying Dean Harens away from TV?

JOHN MARSON, the Metropolitan's manager, in with a smart idea of Director Frank La Falce . . . For the week before the announcing of the Academy Awards on March 23, the Met will be showing a different current Oscar nominee each day . . . One hurdle has been to pass over the more recently shown or current pictures, in favor of those you may have forgotten, but which have been nominated for various categories . . . Here's the line-up: March 16, "Letter to Three Wives"; 17, "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon"; 18, "White Heat"; 19, "The Stratton Story"; 20, "Come to the Stable"; 21, "Pinkey"; 22, "The Widow." . . . Which means you can go to the Met every day for a week beginning next Wednesday and not go too far wrong.

TONIGHT: Andre Obey's "Noah" opens a three-night run at Lisner Auditorium, a salute to UNESCO's International Theater Month by the George Washington University Players . . . Henry Danilowicz, student and tennis pro, has the title role in this French view of the Flood.

Postlude

Symphony Led With Vigor By Dimitri Mitropoulos

By Paul Hume

Three "M's" ruled the National Symphony in its final Wednesday evening concert of the season.

In Constitution Hall last night, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted music by Mozart and Mahler. The once Greek, now American conductor, has just been appointed musical director of the New York Philharmonic for the coming season.

Mitropoulos performs more contemporary music than any other leading conductor today. He leads an orchestra with great attention to individual lines in various sections of the orchestra.

Vigorous Leadership

He cues in one section after another with unusual vigor. One result of this is a highly accentuated account of such music as Mozart's Magic Flute Overture and his E Flat Symphony, two similiar pieces that opened last night's program. A certain amount of grace departs under such treatment. It is replaced by an angular strength. Your preference will govern your response to such playing.

Mahler's first symphony is another matter. Mitropoulos yields to no one in his affection and understanding for this music. Surely he comprehends it, probably its weaknesses no less than its strength. Omitting the second movement, as is customary, the piece runs just under 50 minutes in length—more than any symphony of Brahms or Beethoven except for the latter's ninth.

Matter of Conjecture

How much Mahler says is again a matter of conjecture. He builds an entire opening movement from a folk song which he used five years before the symphony in his song cycle, Lieder eines Fahrenden Gesellen.

A brief scherzo leads to the pretentious banalities of the half-hour finale. Glimpses of color and originality in the last movement are buried under pages of wearisome meandering. The performance was electric with the orchestra at the top of its form.

Mitropoulos paid tribute, as have his preceding guest conductors this season, in hailing the work Howard Mitchell is doing with the National Symphony.

News Bureau Chief Breaks Hip When Platform Steps Collapse

Wright

The accident happened at the close of a Women's National Press Club luncheon addressed by Gen. Omar Bradley. Wright, veteran Washington newsman, had returned from speaking with Bradley and was walking off the platform when the steps gave way, witnesses said.

General Bradley personally summoned an ambulance, and Wright was taken to Walter Reed Hospital. An Army physician said X-rays revealed a complete fracture with no displacement. Wright was reported "comfortable and cheerful," last night.

Wright, whose home is at 3115 44th st. nw., is president of the National Press Building Corp. and past president of the Gridiron Club. He was accompanied in the ambulance by Maj. Floyd L. Parks, chief of the Public Information and Education Division of the Army.

While waiting for the ambulance, Wright joked wryly that he was "frightened" of women anyhow, and attended his very first luncheon of the Women's Press Club only to wind up with a fractured hip.

D. C. Woman Sues Post and Pearson

Mrs. Ernest Howard of 1521 Monroe st. nw., yesterday sued in District Court for $200,000 damages against The Washington Post, columnist Drew Pearson, and the Bell Syndicate. She asserts that she was libeled in articles published last year in this newspaper.

Monroney Backs Retaliation for British Ban on Oil

President Truman could retaliate against the British ban on American companies' oil under a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative A. S. Monroney (D., Okla.).

The bill would let the President take tariff reprisals in cases where he finds discrimination being used against the products of American companies.

Oil from British-owned companies now enters the United States from Venezuela and the Middle East, but under the present law cannot be singled out for tariff increases.

Day of Prayer Set For Home Missions

Services marking a day of prayer for home missions will be held at 10:30 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Friday at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

Miss Gladys Keith, superintendent of the River Front Mission in New Orleans, will speak at both services, which are under the auspices of the Woman's Baptist Missionary Association of the District of Columbia.

Neely to Speak Today

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) will speak at the Junior Chamber of Commerce luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today in the Hotel Burlington, 1120 Vermont ave. nw.

Judge Refuses To Send Negro To Georgia

Judge Alexander Holtzoff refused yesterday to return to Georgia for trial a confessed moonshiner who fears his codefendants may kill him if he testifies against them.

The Government failed in its removal hearing against Mack McCollum, 30, of 614 Quincy st. nw., who is wanted for prosecution in the Federal courts of Georgia on charges of moonshining and conspiracy to defraud the government of $90,000 in taxes through illegal liquor activities.

McCollum admitted his guilt in District Court yesterday, offered to plead guilty to the indictment against him here, if he can thus escape prosecution under it in Georgia.

McCollum, a Negro, said that "them white folks,"—meaning his alleged coconspirators — promised to kill him if he took the witness stand against them.

McCollum, represented by Attorney Wesley S. Williams, admitted moonshining but denied the Government claim that he was overseer and chief distiller for seven moonshine stills. He said that he was a dsabled veteran and acknowledged that he has served two years in prison.

Bridge to Close For Work on New Arlington Span

The Wilson blvd. bridge over Four Mile Run will close at 9 a. m. today for six weeks to permit the construction of a new bridge, Arlington Highway Division officials announced yesterday.

Motorists in the Dominion Hill area were advised to use either Washington or Lee blvds. as a detour.

The Arnold Bus Line will operate shuttle buses running between Old Dominion Hills and the bridge where connections will be made with Washington-bound buses on the other side. Schedules will be the same as now printed, bus officials said.

Hunter in Health Post

J. Stewart Hunter has been appointed assistant to the surgeon general to handle information for the Public Health Service, the Federal Security Agency said yesterday. Hunter succeeds Bryant Putney, who has resigned to become assistant information director for the Interior Department.

Kirkland Is Confirmed As District Judge

The Senate yesterday confirmed James R. Kirkland as associate judge of District Court.

Judge Kirkland has been serving on the District bench since last fall under a recess appointment by President Truman. The Senate's approval was unanimous and without discussion.

Absentee Vote Bill Tightened In Virginia

Richmond, Va., March 8 (AP).—A House committee did some dental repair work today on the toothless absentee voters bill that left the Senate.

Otherwise a calm descended on the Virginia General Assembly as both branches whipped through their calendars with a minimum of debate. However, the future books promised plenty of action for Thursday and the balance of this last week of the 1950 term. On tap for Thursday are:

Some sort of compromise proposal on poll tax repeal from the House Committee on Privileges and Elections—definitely promised by the chairman of a subcommittee studying the issue.

A "balanced budget" to come from the finance committee for special Senate floor consideration the following day. Chairman Robert O. Norris' reference to "balanced budget" indicated the extra million dollars for school teacher pay tacked on in the House would get the ax.

House debate on the Byrd Senate bill for provisional income tax reductions.

It was the House Committee on Privileges and Elections that strengthened the anaemic absentee voters bill by rubbing out an amendment tacked on in the Senate which would have permitted continuance of hand-to-hand handling of the ballots with local election board officials. The bill sent out of the House committee requires the ballots to be sent to the local boards by registered mail.

The Senate did pass two bills that have caused a lot of shouting by certain business interests. These were the House measures to tighten provisions of the unfair sales act and to levy a $50 license tax on tobacco wholesalers to finance administration of the law. The bills are aimed at the below cost sale of cigarettes as "loss leaders" by chain stores.

'Progress' Show Marks 90th Anniversary at Lansburgh's

Marking the store's ninetieth anniversary this year, a "Pillars of Progress" historical display opened yesterday at Lansburgh and Bros.

The display covers history's highlights from 1860 ,when the store was founded , to the present. The miniatures are fastened to columns on the street floor by a huge hour-glass. They are made of plaster and figures are dressed in period costumes.

Lansburgh

Hirsch

Kahn

They were unveiled yesterday by three men, each of whom has been with the store more than a half century: Sol Lansburgh, president, 62 years with the store; Marx Kahn, buyer of bedware, with the store 54 years, and Max Hirsch, merchandising consultant in the fabric division, 58 years with the store.

Mark Lansburgh, vice president and secretary, presided at the opening ceremonies before over 1000 of the store's 1500 employes. Harold Singer, assistant general merchandising manager, spoke briefly.

The 12 miniatures in historical order; founding of the store 1860; Lincoln's first inauguration; the four-wheel cycle; finishing of the Washington Monument; restoration of the White House under President Theodore Roosevelt; the horseless carriage; women's suffrage; the Charleston dance; the NRA; end of prohibition; the Washington Monument today; Lansburgh's present store.

U. S. Sues Worker for $58,000

The Federal Government is suing one of its own employes—a $6400-a-year mechanical engineer in plumbing—for $58,000.

He is Glen W. Leyde, 39, of 400 Villa la., Ravenwood, in Fairfax County. He is a Veterans' Administration employe.

The Justice Department filed a civil suit against Leyde in Federal Court in Baltimore, alleging he owes the Government $58,000 from wartime contract work.

During the war, Leyde contracted to build 561 life rafts for the U. S. Maritime Commission. The firm of Leyde & Leyde, controlled by Leyde, had completed 124 rafts when the contract was terminated in 1945.

Subsequently the Government charged that Leyde padded the costs of materials and labor. He was indicted by a District Grand Jury in July, 1947, on charges he attempted to swindle the Government. However, he was acquitted by a District Court jury in January, 1948.

The Justice Department replied to that with the civil suit that is being argued in Baltimore before Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

British Want Harsh Treaty For Japanese

London, March 8 (AP).—Britain wants a harsh peace treaty for Japan—one that would keep the defeated country under rigid Allied control for years.

She also wants the island kingdom to pay an unspecified amount of war reparations to nations which suffered through her aggression.

Qualified diplomatic officials who reported this today said the British ideas are continued in a secret memorandum sent recently to the United States.

The informants stressed that while the British plan is being studied closely in Washington it is considered irrelevant until the United States produces a draft treaty of her own. The State Department has announced its experts are working on a draft.

D. C. Painter Gets 14 Years for Two Housebreakings

John N. Kelly, 23, District painter convicted last month on two housebreaking charges, was sentenced yesterday in Alexandria Corporation Court to seven years on each count.

Sentencing of Kelly, who pleaded guilty, was by Judge William P. Woolls. It had been deferred pending a probation officer's report. Kelly's address was given as 819 5th st. nw.

An accomplice, Obert C. Shanholtz, 19, 1168 Neal st. ne., described by police as the "lookout man," drew five-year suspended sentences on each charge.

William Kelly, 27, of Chinquapin Village, Alexandria, John's brother, is scheduled to stand trial today in Corporation Court on charges of receiving stolen goods. Another brother, James, who has been indicted by an Alexandria grand jury for housebreaking, is serving a sentence imposed in Arlington.

ITU Progressives Win Assurance of Election Victory

Indianapolis, March 8 (AP).—Progressive candidates for top offices in the International Typographical Union apparently were assured today of victory in the May 17 election.

On the basis of indorsements from local unions, Don Hurd, secretary-treasurer of the ITU, predicted the Progressive candidates would defeat their Independent opponents "by a majority of from 12,000 to 16,000."

Woodruff Randolph, seeking a fourth term as president, received 422 indorsements. His Independent opponent, C. G. Sparkman, Detroit, received 185. A third candidate, Jesse Manbeck, Washington, D. C., got 18, not enough to win a place on the ballot.

Hurd listed final indorsements including:

First vice president—Charles Lyon, Lynn, Mass., 411; John Evans, Washington, D. C., 273.

Up to Judge to Make Silent Man Talk

Ed Davis, still isn't talking.

The man who, police say, refused to give his age, address or other information when arrested for unauthorized use of an auto and eight traffic charges, waived a premilimary hearing in Municipal Court yesterday on the unauthorized use charge.

He was held in $1000 bond for the grand jury on this charge. The traffic cases will be heard today.

Davis, of no fixed address, was arrested by Police Pvt. R. A. Eldridge, jr. Tuesday night at 13th and T sts. nw., after a short foot race.

The sprint followed an auto chase which began at 13th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., and ended, police said, with Davis driving the car into two trees on the pavement in front of 1816 13th st. nw.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Hidden Cop Keeps Eye on Virginia Visitors

Virginia motorists coming over Key Bridge and turning right into Whitehurst Freeway are cautioned to be on the lookout for a hidden speed cop.

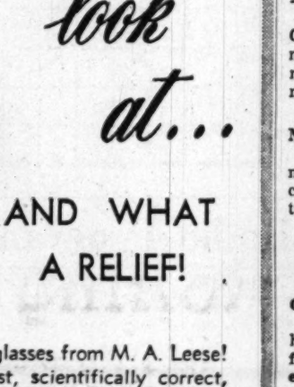
He usually enters the Freeway from Canal rd. and then parks in the right-hand lane, just short of the point where the Key Bridge turn-off merges with the Freeway. If you're coming from Virginia, it's almost impossible to see him.

Whenever traffic officials are asked about such practices, they tell me:

"Motorcycle men are supposed to patrol, not lay in wait. True enough, a man can't keep rolling every minute he's on duty; but we do not believe in speed traps."

How this general policy can be reconciled with a specific set of circumstances such as those outlined above is a bit hazy to me.

Nevertheless, motorists in the area would do well to watch their speedometers carefully. It's a good habit to acquire, quite apart from speed cops.



It would appear that, as a kitchen mechanic, Ted is a smashing success.

INEPT DISK JOCKEY

Ted Bullockus of 6323 Luzon ave. nw. reports that anybody who doubts the existence of flying saucers need only drop in at his house any night his wife makes him dry the dishes.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

We are constantly reminded to drive carefully, and obey all traffic laws and signals. But what about the necessity for matching wits with "traffic acrobats"—especially when they're members of the police force?

A couple of Sundays ago the car in which I was riding was waiting for the right-turn arrow at Columbia rd. and Park pl. nw. when a policeman came by in a private car bearing license No. (deleted).

He squeezed through a narrow opening on our left, jockeyed in front of us, then whipped around us to the right at something more than 30 miles per hour. When he turned left at Park rd., we were two blocks behind him.

Is this the way the police department is supposed to set us a good example?

Name Withheld

Dear Sir:

Definitely not. If you report this bird to his precinct captain, or to police headquarters, he'll get what's coming to him.

But that's your job, not mine. Unless a citizen is willing to have his name used in connection with a complaint, I don't think it's fair to level charges at the policeman, or to ask his superiors to investigate.

But I do know that police officials will not tolerate this type of conduct by members of the force, and that they definitely do expect every man in uniform to set a good example for the community. It's the citizen's duty to cooperate by reporting misconduct.

Bill.

Richard Sharfman of 17 Elmira st. se., who is 8-going-on-9, coins a brand new word for the television industry:

"Televersion"—the television version of a stage play or movie.

"If it hadn't been for me, he'd have been a nobody. When I found him, he was on the south end of a northbound plow."

N. Allen of the All States Hotel writes: "After having worn a hearing device for years, without pleasure, it is pure joy to tune out the streetcar radios."

THINGS ARE LOOKING UP

Labor unrest seems to be diminishing. The coal strike is settled and most of the major league holdouts have signed their 1950 contracts.

ALL IS NOT LOST

My car is now in hock.
But what care I, since Spring is nigh,
And soon there will be Bock.

Merry-Go-Round

At the Forks Of Roads to War or Peace

By Drew Pearson

Some people around Washington think I've been nagging Government officials by last week's letters on winning the peace. Maybe so. However, peace is something that about 15 million American men thought they were fighting for, and which an entire Nation still devoutly hopes for, so I'm going to keep on nagging.

Pearson

However, since it's not quite fair to put others on the spot without giving your own views, here are my own gropings toward that most precious and elusive of all goals—permanent peace.

The word "groping" is used intentionally, because there can be no sure-fire plan for peace. Moreover, the ideas that follow bear no copyright or claim to originality. In brief, I believe the United States has two general alternatives:

1. One is the gruesome alternative of dropping the bomb now, when we are way ahead in a A-bomb production.

2. The other is the difficult, back-breaking job of working at peace for a period of 25 to 50 years, with sacrifices beyond those which we have ever contemplated before.

To some people, the first alternative, horrible as it is, might seem the easier. In fact, war frequently seems the most convenient way out of an international impasse, which is one reason dictators declare war. Furthermore, the United States, despite the leak of atomic secrets to Russia, is far ahead in the production of atomic bombs, and will continue that lead for at least a year, probably longer.

But if we wait much beyond that, the military odds against us increase.

With the Russian population increasing much faster than ours, and with a greater proportion of her budget spent on armament, time is running rapidly against us.

Alternative No. 2 is a 25-to-50-year war of nerves, of sacrifice and of diplomatic jujitsu.

This is a much tougher battle than appears on the surface. For one thing, the Soviet government is unalterably pledged to sabotaging the free world, and any conferences that we or Winston Churchill may have with Joe Stalin aren't going to change that fact.

The Politburo sets policy and it has been fixed in one groove for years—a groove that looks to the day when the free world will fall of its own weight, plus persistent, cunning digging around the roots of the tree of freedom by the Soviet world.

The idea that the Communist and democratic systems can live together side by side, as suggested by Winston Churchill, is pure poppycock.

Nevertheless, despite these depressing odds, I still believe we should adopt the second alternative.

First it would take years to recover from the chaos left by an atomic war.

Nor would the bitterness of the rest of the world be much less.

Finally, and aside from the opinion of the rest of the world, we have to live with ourselves. We cannot lose our own self-respect.

ST. PATICK'S DAY is just around the corner, and it's time to think of a party again. Today we'll give you our recipe for a delicious ice cream you can make, and tell you about a wonderful sausage you can find at the Market.

Bock beer and St. Patrick's Day sort of go together, and so do Bockwurst sausage and Bock beer. You can find this good sausage at Fred Welgert's stand again this week. Last time we mentioned it, he sold out, so better hurry down this weekend if you like Bockwurst.

Now for that St. Patrick's Day party. Why not try a different refreshment—for instance, Calavo ice cream?

Calavo Ice Cream is smooth and creamy without the addition of cream. The velvety textured sieved Calavo does the trick. The ice cream is a custard base type with the delicate but unmistakable flavor and color of Calavo to give it new appeal.

CALAVO ICE CREAM

2 egg yolks
¾ cup granulated sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ teaspoon almond extract
2½ cups sieved Calavo
Few drops green food coloring

Beat egg yolks slightly and add ½ cup sugar, salt and milk. Cook over low heat until mixture coats spoon, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and add flavorings. Cool. Pour into refrigerator tray and place in freezing compartment with control set at lowest temperature. To prepare Calavo, cut into halves and remove seed and skin. Force fruit through sieve. When frozen mixture is mushy, fold in Calavo combined with remaining ¼ cup sugar. Blend in food coloring, continue freezing and stir well 2 or three times at 15-minute intervals. When firm reset temperature control to normal. Serves 8.
